MAPPING THE BRAIN.
Good Results for Man that Have Come From Vivisection.

From New York Times.

A remarkable surgical operation was described at the meeting of the British Medical Association, held on the 13th ult., by Surgeon Horley of the Bloomsbury National Hospital for the Paralyzed and Epileptic. The patient upon whom the operation had been performed was exhibited by the successful operator. The case is a very interesting one. It shows how great progress has been made recently in brain surgery and in the art of locating the seat of disease at the surface of the brain before the surgeon's instruments are used. It also shows once more and in a striking way how much has been gained for the human race by experiments upon living animals. The patient exhibited by Dr. Horley was treated for epilepsy. It was decided that his skull should be opened in order that the cause of irritation might be removed. But at what point should the opening be made? Was it possible for the physician to locate accurately the position of the morbid growth? A spot on the skull was pointed out, although there were no external indications by which the physician could be guided or assisted. At that spot the skull was opened. There a tumor was found imbedded in the brain substance. This tumor, which was described as the seat of disease at the surface of the brain, was removed. The cause of irritation having been taken away, the patient ceased to be an epileptic. Before the operation was performed he had been great and violent, and both the frequency and the severity of his fits had been increasing. When he was exhibited at Brighton, one month after the operation, the fits had not returned. Two other patients, whose skulls had been opened for the removal of diseased structure or morbid growth, were shown at the same meeting by Dr. Horley, but in these cases the physician had been assisted in locating the seat of disturbance on the surface of the brain by external marks, caused by injury in one case and by transmitting the galvanic current in the other. The surgeon's treatment of these patients was successful, but for obvious reasons the first case was far more remarkable. In the first case the point at which the skull should be opened was determined solely by the fact that the patient's fits began in the muscles which act upon the left thumb. Knowing this, the attending physician also knew that the region of the brain which excites or governs the movements of those muscles was irritated by something that should be removed. He knew under what part of the skull that part of the brain surface could be found. He pointed out the part of the skull which covered that part of the brain; the surgeon removed the bony covering; the tumor was revealed and taken out. The art of locating accurately in this way the seat of disturbance has been developed by a long series of experiments upon the brains of living animals. It is one of the greatest of the results that have been attained by what is commonly called vivisection—a broad term which covers experiments of many kinds, some of which do not necessarily fall under a strict definition of the word. By the side of this art the art of surgery has been developed, and improved by means of vivisection. Ability to locate the irritating growth and ability to remove it without killing the patient have been obtained alike in great measure by experiments upon living animals. The results are already of great value to mankind.

My Treasures.
The flowers I planted in the flush of spring
Have budded, bloomed, and withered long ago.
The grain my lavish fingers used to throw
Long since was reaped for other's gain; yet I
Yet I am rich amid my nature's dearth.
My gold is where the rainbow touches earth.
My wealth is molten of full many an ore,
Dug from the sacred caverns of the past;
Stored where the secret light is cast;
Filed in the promise land that lies before.
All bleed with all of precious worth,
All hid just where the rainbow touches earth.
And memory, faith, and hope its guardians are,
As holding love's strong hand I make my way.
Knowing I near a little every day
The one sure goal where, passing o'er the bar,
I find in all the glow of second birth,
My treasures, where the rainbow touches earth.

BESIDE TILDEN'S GRAVE

THE PICTURESQUE BURIAL AT NEW LEBANON, N. Y.

The Great Democrat Sleeps Amid Ancestors in the Country Burial Ground—A White-Draped Catafalque His Latest Portrait—Gramercy Park.

At New Lebanon, Columbia county, the mortal remains of Samuel Jones were buried, Saturday, Aug. 7. There, little country hamlet, his life started, 72 years ago. When it had wended the body and taken its flight to unreturning, the clay mold it had inhabited given back to the same kindly earth of Lebanon.

The portrait in the illustration is a photograph taken only weeks before Tilden died. It is a picture of a man who has been called the "Great Democrat" and the "Father of the People." He was a man of great energy and a strong character. He was a man who was not afraid to stand up for his principles. He was a man who was not afraid to take on the powerful. He was a man who was not afraid to die for his country.

Rumors had the distinguished old man only weeks before Tilden died. He was a man who was not afraid to stand up for his principles. He was a man who was not afraid to take on the powerful. He was a man who was not afraid to die for his country.

The president attended Mr. Tilden's funeral. The funeral was held at the great master Democratic members of the cabinet also attended. The funeral was held at the great master Democratic members of the cabinet also attended.

A striking and pleasing feature of the funeral was the presence of the president. The president attended Mr. Tilden's funeral. The funeral was held at the great master Democratic members of the cabinet also attended.

Many famous men have died in the city of New York. The funeral of Mr. Tilden was a great event. The funeral was held at the great master Democratic members of the cabinet also attended.

When he walked, it was with a firm step, painful to be seen. It was the only one of the great men who had died in the city of New York. The funeral was held at the great master Democratic members of the cabinet also attended.

The Tilden burial plot is of beautiful design. Probably Mr. Tilden planned it, for it was the work of his mind. The plot is in the city of New York. The funeral was held at the great master Democratic members of the cabinet also attended.
