FOR THE NURSERY.

Convenient Combination of High Chair, Low Chair and Table.
The combination chair and table shown in the accompanying illustration is a handy arrangement in a home where there is a child and is a source of amusement as well as a piece of furniture of considerable utility. Placed one upon the other, the combination makes an ideal high chair, and the il-

NURSERY CHAIR AND TABLE.

Illustration shows how the chair and its stand, which together measure a little more than three feet in height, can be taken apart to form a perfect little table and chair, just such a pair as would delight any child. To make the high chair the chair is placed upon the stand, and the projection which forms the tray of the table, which works on hinges, is raised and hooked fast to the border on the table, thus holding the chair fast in place and preventing tipping. This combination can be made of an old chair cut down and a small stand of the right size. Be sure that the raised border on the table and the tray when hooked up fit snugly to the feet of the chair.

Marking Table Linen.

The marking of table linen is an operation that often bothers the average housekeeper. If she be well to do, she can hire other women to embroider the initials or monogram in the solid white embroidery that is so handsome and so expensive or she may simply stamp her table napkins and towels with a stencil and India ink. This looks cheap, as it is. Spool embroidery, which is novel, easy and pretty when done, offers a happy medium between the two. One woman who does a good deal of it says the first step is to select a spool and draw a circle faintly around it on the article to be marked. Start at the bottom of the circle and brier stitch around nearly half way. Then start again at the bottom and stitch around the other half. At the top leave a tiny space, and the effect will be that of a dainty laurel wreath. If the wreath is extended at the bottom in two small straight lines crossing each other the wreath effect is heightened. A small bowknot at the base is also pretty. In the center draw the desired initial with a pencil, working it finely and closely in over and over.

A Cure For Superfluous Hairs.

There is a very simple remedy for superfluous hairs which, if persisted in, cannot fail to bring the desired results. The simple remedy is hydrozone. Hydrozone applied to the hairs will bleach them and in time cause them to fall out. An equal proportion of ammonia should be used with the hydrozone. If the skin cannot stand the ammonia the hydrozone should be used alone. Another equally effective remedy is a pair of tweezers, by which the hairs can be pulled out by the roots. After the hairs have been pulled apply a little glycerine to the inflamed surface. The hydrozone treatment is absolutely effective when used constantly. The only absolute cure for superfluous hairs is the electric needle. This needle pierces the roots and destroys them. It is a painful, tedious and expensive process, while the hydrozone applied as above directed will do the work quite as effectively. — American Queen.

Some Good Advice.

Don't sleep with the hand under the cheek. It will numb and wrinkle the skin.
Don't let the jaw drop just at the moment of falling asleep. It tends to make lines on either side of the mouth.
Don't use powder on the face. It works its way into every line and digs it deeper and deeper.
Don't be afraid of friction for the face. Freshness is prolonged by the tepid bath in which bran has been stirred, followed by light friction. This keeps the blood at the surface.
Don't indulge in the essentially feminine habit of "knitting the brow." Take life less strenuously.
Don't always be thinking of something. Sometimes think of nothing.

Attention to Details of Dress.

It is attention to the small details of her costume that makes a woman well dressed. Her dress may be beautiful, but if her gloves are not appropriate the effect is ruined. Her hat may be suitable and becoming, but if it is covered by the wrong veil all is lost. If her shoes are not in keeping she will not appear as a well dressed woman. The reason that the French woman is one of the best dressed women in the world is that she pays strict attention to even the smallest details. She has no glaring contrasts, and no one part of her costume is conspicuous. All is harmony and the tout ensemble restful and pleasing.

Ironing With the Clothes Wringer.

An authority on domestic economy advises the housekeeper of limited means to save her fire and strength and to do as much ironing with the clothes wringer as possible. Plain pieces, like towels, pillowcases, sheets, merinos and stockings, put through the wringer will be smooth enough for all practical purposes if the roller is tight. Life is too short and flesh and blood too precious to be wasted sprinkling, folding, unfolding, ironing, re-folding and airing a lot of white goods.

Who Owns The Liberty Bell?

Quite a controversy is raging around one of the most precious relics of American history—the "Liberty Bell," that rang out the proclamation of national independence. This bell, as all the world knows, is hung in the belfry of Independence Hall, Philadelphia; but lately it has been taken from its place and exhibited in Boston, Charleston and other cities. Increased by what is regarded as the undignified exposure of the relic to the dangers of these "junketing trips," three ladies, members of an old Philadelphia family, now make the claim that the bell is their private property. Their announcement, says the Philadelphia "Evening Telegraph," "comes with a sudden shock to the people of Philadelphia." The same paper continues:

"It is doubtful if the claim which has been put forth could be sustained in a court of law, and certainly the city would resist it to the uttermost, if it should be so seriously advanced as to take the shape of a demand for the custody of the relic of the bell. That, however, the claimants declare, is not their purpose; all that they desire is that the sacred relic and emblem of our national independence shall not again be exposed to the vicissitudes attending the carrying of it around the country for exhibition purposes, even when the cultivation of patriotic sentiment is the underlying motive. If the alleged owners of the bell should succeed in establishing their claim so far as to prevent it from being taken on another councilman's junket, they would deserve and receive the hearty thanks of the vast majority of Philadelphians."

"The basis of the claim to private ownership of the relic is at least a plausible one. It is declared by the claimants that the councils which bargained with their ancestor for the casting of the Liberty Bell's successor purchased a light valuation on the relic that they agreed to let it go to the bell-founder as old metal, in consideration of an abatement of his bill to the amount of $400. The person who thereby became its lawful owner might have treated it as junk by breaking it up and throwing the fragments into the melting-pot; but he was more patriotic than the City Fathers of that day, and permitted the bell to remain in the custody of the city, confident that it would in due time be appreciated at its true value."

"From that day to this the claim to private ownership has been in abeyance, and City Solicitor Kinney expresses the opinion that, even if the foundation of the original claim should be recognized, the Bell has become the absolute property of the city of Philadelphia by prescription. Whether or not this view would be upheld by the courts can only be ascertained by the test of litigation. An appeal to the courts may possibly be made, if councils should grant the request of the St. Louis Fair managers to have the Liberty Bell carted across the country to become one of the side attractions of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition next year."

Wasted Moments.

Next to his prayers, the most regular and unfeeling duty that old Mr. Snipes performed was the winding-up of his clock.

As he explained to his chums, "That clock is the pride of my life. For thirty-five years, man and boy, have I wound him up every night right upon ten o'clock, and always before eleven. I couldn't sleep without doing it; I'd as soon, or sooner, go without my food than miss doing it."

It was quite a comical thing, and his wife, sharing his pride in the timepiece, naturally aided his madness on the one theme.

One evening they had a new acquaintance to supper, who happened to be a watchmaker.

"Excuse me a minute," said Mr. Snipes, at ten-thirty, "while I wind up the clock."

The jeweler looked at it. "That's a rather nice clock," he said.

"I should think it is," cried Mr. Snipes. "It's the pride of my heart. So it is of yours, ain't it, wife?"

"That it is," said his complacent spouse.

"Man and boy," went on Mr. Snipes, commencing his usual story, "man and boy for thirty-five years have I wound up that clock every night regular between ten and eleven."

"Every night!" struck in the jeweler.

"Ay, man, every night!" echoed Mr. Snipes.

"Well, of all the born idiots!" returned the other. "Why, how many weeks of your life have you wasted? It's an eight-day clock!"

His Forte.

The seven-year-old pride of the family had concluded his recitation of "The Boy Who Went on the Burning Deck," and the fond mother, turning with dignified complacency to the unmoved visitor, remarked:

"And I have been assured by really eminent judges, Mr. Marterdum, that he closely approaches Sir Henry Irving in dramatic style, without, however, that great actor's offensive mannerisms."

"I am not surprised to hear it!" assented the victimized one, with a strained smile.

"Mabel, also," continued the matron, blandly indicating a six-year-old mite of flaxen-haired precocity, "plays exquisitely."

Her rendering of "In My Cottage Near a Wood," with variations, is not dissimilar in touch and feeling to Paderewski at his best—as you shall presently determine; while Egbert, yonder (get your slate and pencil ready, darling), though barely turned four, draws engines and railway lines in a manner suggestive of Academy honors at no very distant future. They all have their fortes, you see! In fact, most people have, when you come to think of it. What is your forte, Mr. Marterdum?"

"Mine, madam?" gasped the wretched listener. "Mine? Oh, I—I run!"

And he suited the action to the word.

A Question of Gender.

While he was being shown about Chicago by the Mayor of the city, a French visitor expressed his thanks, and added, "But I am sorry so to cockroach on your time." "Oh," answered the Mayor, "do not think of that. But you do not mean cockroach, Monsieur; you mean 'gender.' 'Oh, is it? I see a difference in gender' (the visitor supposing he ought to have said 'gender')."
