

“Sure, I was forgetting my duty altogether,” says Healy smiling at her, and put down his flower and moved solemnly to the offending leaf.

Mistress Leigh and the flower departed together.

Mr. Healy turned round again: “Oh Eve, Eve!” said he aloud—and heard the ripple of a laugh.

(To be continued)