QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Miscellaneous.

MAKING CIDER.

Will you kindly tell me the way to make cider? J. G.

Ans.—Cider should be made from sound, ripe, clean apples, and the fruit should possess a sugar content of not less than 7.5 to 8.5 per cent., so a few sweet apples are necessary. Cider is simply the fruit juice of the apple, and is made by grinding the apples into a pulp and squeezing out the juice by means of a press. Regular cider mills and presses are used where it is made on any considerable scale.

FOUL IN THE FEET.

1. What shall I do in order to prevent a disease which is spreading among my stock? The nature of the disease is in the form of a running sore in the foot, between the two toes. The first we notice is lameness, then a swelling of the foot, and finally the breaking and running. Some of them continue to be lame two months, while others are better in about two or three weeks.

2. How shall I treat it?
3. What is the name of the disease?
4. Would it be advisable to destroy the cattle, and do the Government allow the owner any percentage for the loss of the beasts? W. J. C.

Ans.—This is foul in the feet, caused by standing in or walking through irritating substances, as liquid manure, swampy land, rushes, etc. The extreme wet season may have caused it by making yards, lanes, and even pastures, muddy. Place in dry, comfortable quarters. Cleanse between the clouts by bathing with warm water. Apply hot poultices of linseed meal, or boiled turnips with a little powdered charcoal. When the inflammation is allayed, dress three times daily with carbolic acid one part, sweet oil twenty parts. In some cases it is necessary to pare away some of the hoof. If proud flesh has formed, apply a caustic, as equal parts of butter of antimony and tincture of myrrh, applied with a feather once daily for two or three times. If they do not yield readily to this treatment, call your veterinarian. Do not think of destroying the cattle, as the disease is not a contagious one.

MORE MOURNING DOVES.

I saw in "The Farmer's Advocate" a reward of one thousand dollars if anyone could find a pair of wild pigeons nesting. I expect that would be rather hard to do, especially at this time of the year. But there are some to be seen in this neighborhood at the present time. I told a neighbor I thought I saw some on his place, so during the week he saw about twenty, so he 'phoned me and told me they were wild pigeons without any mistake. He said it must be close on to forty years since they were around before. They are of a slate color, but they do not look quite so large as the tame pigeons to me, as I saw them sitting, and in their manner of flight they resemble the tame pigeon. T. B.

Ans.—This letter was forwarded to Prof. Wm. Lochhead, Macdonald College, Que., a copy of whose reply, addressed to our correspondent, is appended:

Your description of the pigeons you saw is not very definite, and I am inclined to believe that you are mistaking the mourning dove for the passenger pigeon. Every wild pigeon is not a passenger pigeon. Mourning doves are quite plentiful, but the passenger pigeon of forty years ago has not yet been located, in spite of the awards offered. With this I am sending you a colored illustration which will enable you to distinguish clearly between the mourning dove pigeon and the wild passenger pigeon. If after careful reading of the pamphlet and comparison of the birds, and if after careful observation at close range you still think that the wild pigeons in your locality are passenger pigeons, then you may write me again, and I shall have some expert visit your locality and make a report. I may say that the award is still available, and would only be too gladly given to any person who has found the long-lost passenger pigeon. W. LOCHHEAD.
