NEWS NOTES
FROM THE COUNTRYSIDE

ing industries and the amount of traffic that would likely originate in the district. It is also his work to make a personal examination of the general topographical conditions of the country and to decide upon the best locality for the proposed route, having in mind the probable cost of construction. This would, of course, depend upon the engineering difficulties to be overcome, such as heavy grades and cuts or expensive bridging operations.The engineer also keeps in mind the desirability of securing interchange of traffic with the large railway corporations. For instance, a line built into this county should connect with the Grand Trunk and C. P. R. at the most convenient junction point.
On Tuesday forenoon Mr. Bucke in company with Mayor Newman, Warden Purcell, Dr. T. S. Philip, and Messrs. J. H. Port and A. E. Cal-nan took a motor trip through Bloomfield, Wellington, Hillier and Melville, and in the afternoon took a trip to Demorestville, Northport and Solmesville. On Wednesday morning Mr. Bucke and Mayor Newman visited Glenora, and in company with M. F. S. Wilson took a trip to Adolphustown. After looking over the ground the engineer seemed to be of the opinion that a Hydro Electric road for Prince Edward would be quite justified. "Prince Edward," said Mr. Bucke, "ought to have a railway, and can afford to build one."It is quite probable that a survey party will be at work in the country in a few days.—The Gazette.

NAPANEK.

A very unfortunate accident happened to Mr. Andrew Armstrong of Denbigh. He stepped in front of his mower to hand a switch to his son, who was driving the team when the horses suddenly started and the lawyer knives cut one of his feet above the ankle. Dr. Adams was called, who dressed and bandaged the leg and had Mr. Armstrong sent to the Kingston General Hospital.On Tuesday night, Margaret, wife of John Doran, Richmond, passed away in the Hotel Dieu after an illness of a month's duration. The deceased was thirty-two years of age, and has been a resident of Richmond for several years. The remains were brought to Napanea on Wednesday afternoon, and were accompanied by the deceased's husband.A real camp wedding was celebrated at high noon on Saturday last, 26, inst., at "Wegowide," the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Paul, at Camp Sans Souci, Belleville. The day left nothing to be desired and argued well for the future happiness of two of Napanea's popular young people. The sun shone brightly and the summer home, transformed into a bower of cedars and pine whose sweet fragrance filled the air, overlooking Bay of Quinte, peaceful and calm, presented a very pretty appearance, while the gentle breeze wafted among the trees and shrubs, the sweet notes of many a wild song bird.
At high noon, the bridegroom, Robert Francis Holland, waited for his bride, Edna Marion Paul, under a canopy of cedars decorated with golden glow. Gowned in white silk middle with white corduroy skirt, leaning on the arm of her father, the bride, beaming and modest, passed through wedding guests signed the commemorative record. An elaborate and dainty wedding breakfast was served, with the Misses Muriel Paul and Florence Stevens, of Napanea, and Mrs. Doug-lar Carter, of Picton, serving. The bride received many beautiful and bride presented many beautiful and popular presents, testifying to her popularity and the high esteem in which she is held. The bride and groom left Camp Sans Souci by automobile appropriately decorated with old shoes and serpentine, amid showers of rice and confetti, greeted with good wishes from the guests to spend their honeymoon at Bobaygeon and the Thousand Islands.—The Express.

from Belleville motored to Barfield camp where they were royally entertained by Col. Adams and his staff of officers of the 155th Battalion. Mr.
Bedford was very enthusiastic about the camp and especially with the 155 officers.A week before last Lieut. James Cole of the 155th Battalion Barfield camp spent a few hours of Thursday in town saying goodbye to his father

It is now known that few High perance Act by deciding to dispense with

BAPTISTE LAKE.

In Northern Hastings, west of Bancroft, is a far scattered tribe of Huron Indians, whose present chief is "Johnnie Baptiste," a staid hunter of eighty years, who lives with his daughter and half-brother, Grandson, in his log cabin on the shore of Baptiste Lake. Besides children and grandchildren Johnnie has many other relatives. He has a meadow facing the lake containing many shocks of as good hay as one would see anywhere in Ontario, a fine garden, pigs, cows, chickens, geese and a variety of other household which he has inherited from his father, who was a hunter and a free to chase the deer in the great range of forest which begins behind the cabin and stretches far west to where the waters of the lake join the Algonquin National Park.Johnnie's broad, round face is usually very stolid but when he smiles it is very pleasant. He has a peculiar way of saying "Yes" and "No," making it "Yi-z" with the "i" and "z" sound long drawn out. He makes very frequent use of this word for Indian-like he is no talker.
The last few days he has been very much concerned about harvesting his hay. The cleared ground around his cabin is so hummocky from lack of ploughing and that he is unable to cut it all with a scythe. The morning he was carefully sharpening his sickle with his sleeves rolled up, when he landed on his shore. "Well Johnnie," we asked him, "you get much hay yesterday?" "Yi, quite a few," he answered. Johnnie has a sense of humor. He laughs heartily at a joke and is quick to see one, too. One morning while he was in his cabin waiting to take the milk back to the camp—five or six women of us and Johnnie was the only man.
A strange scene to the door, put his head in and hesitated about entering but Johnnie called out, "Come income in, see my girls!"While all are doing their bit for the Empire, at home and abroad, these hundred Indians are proving themselves His Majesty's loyal subjects, for the chief's grandson, Leo Baptiste, has enlisted and is accounted the best shot in the 155th Battalion.It is from this family that Baptiste Lake (Bateese) derives its name, though its real Indian name is "Cin-dawaunne." It lies partly in Hastings County and partly in Haliburton, is from twelve to fifteen miles long and extends chiefly in an east and west direction, but has many lake inlets reaching several miles inland. The shore in some places is high reaching up into great overshadowing hills, which are wooded, chiefly with birch, while here and there is a pretty green pine. In other places the shore is low and even rocky. The New York River enters the lake at the head of one of the long inlets to the west, and flows through the Bancroft village and winds about the forest-clad hills to the north-east till it joins the Madawaska, which in turn flows into the great Ottawa.Most of the long shore-line of this lake is wilderness of impenetrable bush, out from which old pine trunks devoid of branches or leaves, rise like masts of shipwrecked vessels in a green sea. Years ago at the time of the pine lumbering industry of this north country, they were passed over as unworthy timber and now they mar the landscape. The silence of this wilderness is now and then broken by the loon's lone cry, by the whip-poor-will's call, by the harkof the night hawk, by the bark of the hound as it chases the deer through the brake or by the cracking of the bushes as the bear bounds his way through the thicket. Other sounds break the stillness also. Sometimes an "alligator" puffs slowly down the lake, trailing a scow loaded with hardwood lumber from a camp far up the lake. Sometimes a motor-boat with its gay flags and noisy engine darts rapidly into one of these secluded bays and circles about in the deep, cool waters. Then the sound of merry laughter re-echoes from the hills; the loon, disturbed in his swim sings and flies away to some quieter spot; the waters curl behind the boat in a long swell which laps upon the lonely shore, but on the disappearance of the boat, back through the outer gap, the long silence of the hills settles down again.But the shores of Baptiste Lake are not all lonely and solitary. There is a camping ground near Baptiste station, on a birch-wooded point where the white roofs of cottages gleam among the foliage. This part of the lake is a broad bay and opposite the camping place are high rounded wooded hills, through the gap in which we can see the bright water of the lake stretching far away. Around the foot of the hills in the morning shadow, the Irondele Railway train goes out westward into the world, and in the evening comes back again, leaving a trail of smoke about the hillsides. We watch eagerly at the point for that evening train, for sometimes the conductor the brakeman is kind enough to throw out a daily newspaper, but as there are several pairs of hands ready to catch it, we are sometimes disappointed.During the excavation and levelling of the ground for the new trail of the birch point, Mr. Fair, of Bancroft, recently discovered many curious Indian relics. Bodies were found sitting in their graves, with the head leaning on the knees. They were always facing the east, probably towards the Happy Hunting Grounds.In the earth over one of these graves a large pine root had grown, showing that this burying place is probably three hundred years old. The spears arrowheads and pottery vessels of artistic design, which were found, are at present in the Museum of the Normal School at Toronto, and in the Museum of Queen's University, Kingston.Although Baptiste Lake has its Indian history it has another past as well. Leading down to its shores are many old corduroy roads over which the lumbermen drew timber in the spring. These roads are now moss-grown, and the logs composing them are decayed and some have fallen in.
It has its past of adventure too, for all who live here have some bear or wolf story to tell. Indeed one of the best of the hunting grounds is at the head of this lake.If you seek to study Indian lore, if you seek adventure or if you seek romance around the camp fire, come to Baptiste. If you seek riches of the mine, around Baptiste you will find rock containing precious stones, moonstone and sodalite, and hills abounding in iron, copper, mica, graphite and marble. If you seek rest from labor in the office or behind the counter, come to Baptiste and let the breezes fan your brow and your spirit with the freedom and simplicity of a life close to Nature.

EVENTS MOVE SWIFTLY.

Serbians, Roumanians, and Russians Have Joined Forces.LONDON, Sept. 5.—Three outstanding developments in the Balkan situation are: Bulgaria's declaration of war against Roumania, reported in a Reuter despatch from Salonica; declaration of war against Roumania by Turkey; the entrance of Serbian troops into Rou-mania, where they have joined forces with the Roumanian and Russian troops.Meantime the Roumanian armies are continuing their rapid advance into Transylvania. All of the Tar-gus valley has been occupied in the district of Kronstadt and the important industrial centre of Petroneny, six miles within the Hungarian frontier, has been seized, according to an official announcement.King Ferdinand has taken command of the Roumanian forces, with Gen. Ilesco as chief of the general staff. It is reported that the commanders are preparing to throw an additional army across the Danube to attack the Rutenic forces in Northern Serbia. Thus far, the Roumanian losses have been slight.
