"Smith, Jones, Brown or Robinson," Mrs. Wheat got up and walked quickly away.

Billy went to the window. Larry. staring after the vanishing lady, was amazed to see her head droop and her bosom swell. Clearly she was on the point of sobbing. He followed her softly and said as she flung herself on a ouch: "Tell me, mammy! You're playing a game. What is it?"

"How did you guess?" mammy said, speaking very low, with her finger on her lip. "You mustn't ever let Billy guess it," she said. "He doesn't know about our money. It came to me from my uncle, the dearest, straitlaced soul. He thought second marriages sin-ful—spiritual bigamy, he called them. So I kept my fortune, which will be Billy's fortune, on condition of remaining always a widow. Now you see why I had to send Tim away. "As if he cared for your money!

And he'd never let Billy lose," Larry said exultantly. But he bent his head reverently to kiss mamny's hand as he added: "But, oh, you are a brick! You made up all this about the name to blind that blessed boy?"

"I had to—there—there wasn't anything else. Tim was such a gentle man," Mrs. Wheat sald, smothering a sob. "You won't tell him, Larry, but all this teasing over his sweetheart's name is just to keep him from suspecting. I don't really oppose him, although I think he is making a mistake. He has promised to wait a year-long enough to find it out for himself."

"What's wrong with her?" Larry "Everything, but mostly that she's too old and wise and hard," Mrs. Wheat said comprehensively. "I mean that she was born too old; actually they are but a month apart. She is much too clever to care really for my dear, big blundering, pretty boy, but she cares a whole lot for what he can give her You ought to see her eying my pearls. I could forgive her a little if she had no pearls of her own. To be rich and grasping is so much worse than to yearn for what one never has had. I could break up the match tomorrow by etting her know I hold the purse strings, but that would lose me my boy, and he's everything."

"She shan't have him, and you shan't lose him. Listen! I've got an idea,' Larry said.

"Oh, yes! Billy has it again, and this time very bad," Mrs. Wheat said, nodding across at her son. "But you won't wonder at it when you hear the Mammy bent toward him, her brimming eyes shining. They talked in whispers for two minutes, then Larry rushed away, headed for the telegraph new sweetheart's name—Sarah-Susan Sarah-Susan, in wait for Billy, was easily carried along. As the three en-tered mammy's private parlor they saw her standing beside a tall, handsome fellow, baldish and grayish, to be sure, but ruddy and with the happiest merry eyes. Shamelessly he put his arms around mammy, not even giving Billy a finger until he had said: "I had to have her, even if it meant changin' me name and nation, son. Sure, life was no life without her. Wish me joy, lad, of me new home and a wife in it.

As she spoke she had been stripping mammy! How could you do it?"
"Don't you understand, Larry, dear?"
mammy said, still blushing. "It was herself of Billy's ring, a simple affair of thready gold with a diamond spark on it. But she quite forgot the diamond pendant at her threat, the circle of brilliants about her arm, not to name many more jewels resting upon her dressing table. Majestically she tossed the ring to Billy—poor crestfallen Billy, who stood at his mother's side. But when Mrs. O'Toole-Merrion drew his head to her breast and patted it as she had done when he was three years old, he lifted it bravely and smiled up at her, saying: "It hurts, mammy, but I'm not going to cry, And I'm not going to starve either. Tim will see to "Sure." Tim said, hugging his new

MAGIC AND RELIGION.

Their Parting Due to the Advance of Civilization.

In west Africa the belief in a new birth without loss of identity is proved by the fact that when a baby arrives in a family it is shown a selection of small articles belonging to deceased members, and the thing which the child catches hold of identifies him as "Uncle John" or "Cousin Emma," and so forth. So far as this belief prevails it is held by some that garments once worn or other objects which have been in intimate contact with a human be ing are penetrated by his personality and remain, as it were, united with

In nearly all stages of civilization now to be found in the world what we call supernatural beings were concerned with the initiation of the magician. The schism between magic and reli gion was a later development of civ ilization. When it occurred, as the history of heresy in Europe and the witch trials teach, it was rather magic In its antisocial aspect than in itself. which was reprobated and punished It is strange in this connection to no tice that the magician was only con demned when he departed from estab-lished custom and established beliefs which involved a severance from the community and an imputation of antisocial ends. Practices essentially magical might be incorporated in religious rites and exercised for what was lieved to be the general good. In such a case they have continued to be exercised with general assent in the highest forms of religion.—London Hos

ODD MARRIAGE CUSTOM.

Porches as Wedding Certificates on the Island of Jersey. Among Jerseymen proper—that is to say, among the descendants of the original inhabitants of the island and not the English or French residents therea very curious and interesting old mar riage custom exists. Upon the completion of the ceremony nd, if in strict accordance with tradi tion, before the happy couple take up residence in their new abode the stonslab at the top of the porch containing the front door is inscribed with the in itials of the bridegroom, those of the bride, the date of the ceremony and two hearts intwined, the latter being an emblem of their intermingled love and the whole forming a most lasting and public certificate of marriage Occasionally, however, a little difficulty arises. The bride may meet with an early death, and in the course of time the widower may desire to re-enter the holy state of matrimony. Having fulfilled his desire, it appears rather puzzling to know what to do about the inscription.

In some cases, therefore, the initials and date of the first wedding have been erased and those of the subse quent ceremony substituted, while in others the initials of the second wife and the date have been added below the first, a second pair of intwine hearts being thought unnecessary. The letters are usually from six to nine Inches in height, so that they may be easily read across the road.—London

Victims of a False Prophet Just before the opening of the Kaffir rebellion in South Africa, about the middle of the last century, the sooth sayers bade the tribes kill their cattle and destroy their crops of grain. The spirits of their ancestors were to arise and help them to exterminate every white man in the country. The advice was solemnly accepted. When the day of the great uprising arrived many of the rebels were already starving. But there came no ghostly herds of cattle out of the earth no crops not sown with hands. Grim, terrible famine swept over the land, and in the months which followed, although the authori-ties did everything in their power to mitigate its horrors, 30,000 victims of false prophet starved to death.

Ventilution.

Have we ever stopped to think how are ancestors two or three generations back lived and flourished with little or no ventilation in their sleeping apartments? The night air used to be considered a very dreadful menace to health and a sure inducer of colds. Bedrooms were kept closely shut, and yet our ancestors, many of them, were hardier than we and lived to good old ages. Animals burrow in their holes at night, breathing the same all at night, breathing the same air over at the hour of one o'clock in the afternoon, on the undermentioned premises by Mr. C. J.
