CORRESPONDENCE

Our wise and honorable Legislature however (that is, the six principal salaried Officers in and out of Council) always so very anxious to establish and preserve the analogy between the British constitution and that of this Colony, and guided by a virtuous solicitude ever to preserve the administration of justice from the fountains of justice and Honor existed not in the very same six salaried Officers; and in themselves they vested the papointment of Sheriff, repealing by their new Sheriff Act of 1855 the old law that had existed for eighty or ninety years.

The gentlemen appointed last year, although all golitical predilections, and the selections for the first year, doubtless, were made with an eye to the objections which were forwarded from the Colony to the Colonial Minister against the new Act which had not the received Hor Majesty's sanction.

The Act, neverticless, being assented to by the Queen, and our very imparitial Government they dare: it is said, that we are to have some rare specimens of non-political gentlemen owing to certain odions actions brought against Her included their mannes of two or three individuals to whom the appointment has a ready been decidly promised, and cortainly they are men admirably well adapted to do the duty required of them, should the government be under the necessity of obtaining a special Jury to shield their friend in need and friend indeed, Mr. but it is a promised and or the present when the character or pockets of two or three persons involved in libel suits!
