IS IT YOU.

Some one's selfish, some one's lazy;
Is it you?
Some one's sense of right is hazy;
Is it you?
Some one lives a life of ease,
Doing largely as he please—
Drifting idly with the breeze;
Is it you?
Some one hopes success will find him;
Is it you?
Some one proudly looks behind him;
Is it you?
Some one full of good advice
Seems to think it rather nice
In a has-been's paradise—
Is it you?
Some one trusts to luck of winning;
Is it you?
Some one craves a new beginning;
Is it you?
Some one says "I never had Such a chance as Jones' lad."
Some one's likewise quite a cad—
Is it you?
Some one's terribly mistaken;
Is it you?
Some one sadly will awaken;
Is it you?
Some one's working on the plan
That a masterful "I can"
Doesn't help to make the Man—
Is it you?

Some one yet may "make a killing;"
And it's you.
Some one needs but to be willing;
And it's you.
Some one better set his jaw,
Cease to be a man of straw,
Get some sand into his craw—
And it's you.

Eggs All the Year.

How to Induce Hens to Lay in Winter.
An English agriculturist who has been investigating Canadian and American methods reports a remarkable achievement in the persuading of hens to lay eggs whatever the temperature.

At Macdonald College, probably the finest Agricultural College in the world, certain varieties of hens have been practically unaffected by cold much more severe than we ever experience in England, yet in England many poultry-keepers scarcely had an egg in the recent cold spell. In the laying competition undertaken by the Utility Poultry Club the northern group of birds have scarcely laid a single egg, while the southern group have laid continuously. Why should Yorkshire, which is much warmer, be worse for hens than Montreal?

AIR AND EXERCISE.

The secret is this. Cold-resisting varieties, of which the Plymouth Rock and White Wyandottes are special favourites, are selected. By using trap nests the best strains are picked out, and then the whole secret, if you have pullets of the right age, is exercise. The hens are given straw bedding a foot or so deep, and in this grain of only one sort at each meal is sprinkled. To recover it the hens must work like Trojans all day, and in consequence of the enforced exercise they have laid a high proportion of eggs in spite of a temperature approaching zero. The 200-eggs-a-year hen is within sight even in the cold countries. In Australia a record of 270 eggs a year has been achieved.

"Anything for air and exercise" is the rule for winter laying, and the reason is entirely scientific. All birds lay up fat against the cold weather, and the fat prevents them laying. Get rid of the fat and yet give the her plenty of food and winter eggs are assured. Even at zero temperature the Canadian hen-houses are not artificially warmed, though a sort of sloping blind is drawn in front of the roosting poles.

Eloping Woman Held.

Mrs. Boohana, who ran away from her home at St. John, N.B., with a man named Summers, was detained at Trepassy Saturday by Const. Brennan by order of Inspector General Sullivan and it is likely will arrive here by Tuesday night's train, as she will be taken to Placentia in the Glencoe. The woman evidently did not know her husband had followed her to Newfoundland, as Saturday night she wired her husband at St. John, N.B., the following: "Held here (Trepassy), serious charge. Intended returning in few weeks. I think you laid charge. Clear me. Will return at once. Answer immediately." The telegraphic people stopped the message here and handed it to Mr. Boohana. The husband wired the giddy woman yesterday morning asking her to forward all his jewellery and a saving bank book which she has in her possession with $200 for the cost of his travelling expenses. The jewellery is worth, he says, $160, and she took in cash $52. He had another telegram from her yesterday morning in which she said that she was willing to return everything her husband would say belonged to him. Mr. Boohana has sent the Canadian authorities a full report of the manner in which their employee Summers wronged him, and he feels certain that he will lose his position with the Canadian Government.

The Adventure From Hudson Bay.

The s.s. Adventure, Capt. Couch, arrived at daylight yesterday morning from Hudson Bay, having been chartered by the Revillon Bros. since early in July plying to the company's various stations in the bay. The ship left here on the 2nd July last at midnight, and arrived at Sydney, C.B., at 11 a.m. the following day, when taking 1,200 tons bunker coal she sailed on the 5th and arrived at Montreal on the 8th. Taking a full load of supplies here, including canoes, boats and other gear, she sailed on the 13th for Hudson Bay and reached Port Harrison on the 25th. In passing it through the Straits on the 21st July, the ship spoke the Danish barque Sarine, chartered by the Hudson Bay Co. and bound for Charlton, in the bottom of James' Bay. The Adventure sailed from Port Harrison on the 28th July, arriving at Strutton on August 3rd. She met very heavy ice between Port Harrison and Strutton the floe being jammed tight against Charles Island in Hudson Strait. Here the Adventure had ample opportunity to prove her prowess as an ice breaker, and she forced her way through the heavy crystal barrier in grand style and without the slightest damage to her hull. The arrival of the ship at James' Bay on August 3rd established a record for her, as never before had a steamer arrived there so early in the season. The ship did not leave there until the 17th, and called again at Port Harrison, where she arrived on the 20th. She sailed again on the 23rd for Wakeham Bay in the Straits, and on the 25th was steaming along for a while in company with the Earl Grey, which steamed out through the Straits with the Earl on board. The Earl Grey then hauled in for Digges Island, and the Adventure proceeded to Wakeham Bay, where she arrived on the 26th. After landing supplies for the station she sailed for Ungava on the 4th of the present month and arrived on the 5th. On the 7th the Hudson Bay Co's steamer Pelican arrived at Ungava from York Harbor factor and Port Churchill, and the Adventure sailed for St. John's on the 13th and had a good run home, the weather being fine until Saturday night when fog detained her off this port until daylight. Capt. Couch and a his crew are in the best of health, and he says that as he came out of the Straits the weather was cold and Button Island and Cape Childleigh were covered with snow but that there was no excessive frost. The Eskimos are all in good health and the men at the various stations are well and contented. There was good work done hunting and trapping down there last winter and spring, and the ship has on board a large cargo of furs and peltries. Explorers and prospectors were busily engaged on the other side of the bay all the summer. These went down on the Stanley and Earl Grey.

Invention of Papers.

SIR GEORGE NEWNES ORIGINATED MANY PUBLICATIONS.

He Originated Tit-Bits and the Strand Which Were the First of Their Kind and Widely Copied—Was Also the Originator of Insurance for Persons Carrying His Papers—How Tit-Bits Started.

He led; the rest followed. Thus may the achievements and career of the late Sir George Newnes—the founder of Tit-Bits, The Strand Magazine and many other publications—whose death is so widely deplored, be summed up. He was a pioneer of modern British journalism—"a man of original invention," to quote from one of the many tributes to his memory. Within six months of the first issue of Tit-Bits in October, 1881, eleven similar papers had been brought out. They died—Tit-Bits lived.

It was in 1880, twelve months before the first number of Tit-Bits was published, that Sir George hit upon the idea which formed the foundation of the great publishing house which bears his name. He was sitting one evening by the fireside, reading a Manchester evening paper, when he chanced upon a story that greatly interested him.

"It told," said Sir George, when relating this important event in his life, "how a couple of children, belonging to a stationmaster, had got into a wagon to which a locomotive was attached. By some accident it started and went down the line without any control. The stationmaster discovered that his children were in the runaway train, and a very exciting and dramatic story was told of how he did all he possibly could to get the train stopped, and how ultimately the children were saved by some one jumping on the footplate and bringing it to a standstill. 'Now,' I said, reading it aloud to my wife, 'that is what I call a real tit-bit. Why has not some one brought out a paper containing nothing but tit-bits like this?'

At that time Sir George, who had not reached his thirtieth year, was engaged in Manchester opening a branch establishment for a London firm selling fancy goods, and his business then prevented him carrying out the project of a paper devoted entirely to tit-bits of interesting reading matter. Twelve months later, however, he made plans for producing such a paper. He went to a wealthy Manchester man with whom he was acquainted, and offered him half the profits which would ensue if he provided the capital. "If he had accepted that offer," said Sir George, "he would have made at least one million sterling, but he refused it." Sir George then went to a firm of Manchester publishers and asked them to bring it out. He only asked for £500 but they pooh-poohed the idea, and other local publishing firms to which he applied said there was nothing in his scheme.

He scraped together all the money he could, produced the paper himself, and enlisted the services of the Newsboys' Brigade to sell it in the streets. Within two hours 5,000 copies had been sold, and within six months the firm who had refused the advance of £500 offered him £16,000 for the publication. Six months later he again refused £30,000 from some London publishers.

From the first Sir George had no doubts about the success of Tit-Bits. "I declared to a friend," he once said, "that within a year the circulation of the paper I had in mind would be 300,000. We had a small wager upon it—a new hat. I received that hat in due course, and a message from the loser to say how pleased he was to lose."

He was a man of amazing energy. Long after the business had developed to its present dimensions, and when every editorial department comprised a large and efficient staff, Sir George would never allow a number of Tit-Bits to appear of which every proof sheet had not passed through his own hands, and there were, almost as long as he remained an active member of the firm, few MSS. sent in for The Strand Magazine which he himself did not carefully read and consider.

Many were the schemes—since extensively copied—which Sir George originated. He it was who first hit upon the idea of newspaper insurance. A poor man had been killed on the railway, and a copy of Tit-Bits was afterwards found on his body. His widow wrote to Sir George, telling him of the circumstances, and asked if he could do anything to as-
