Expecting Too Much.

By RUTH CAMERON.

A neighbor of ours, who has not lived long enough in the neighborhood to be well known to the trades people, came home in a very indignant mood the other day. The reason for her indignation was that the clerk at a drug store would not cash a check for her. "I guess he needn't worry about my being honest," she puffed. "I don't believe there's anyone in this neighborhood that pays their bills any prompter and is more careful about money matters than I."

Lots of People Look Honest, But—Now the check was quite sizeable and the clerk had never seen the woman before. Of course she looked honest, but so do a good many people in prison. If he had made a mistake he would probably have had to make good out of his own pocket. He suggested that she get someone to identify her, but she was in too much of a hurry to stop for that. Instead she left the store in a huff.

He Can't Know How Athletic She Is. Now isn't that thoroughly unreasonable? And yet one often finds people allying just such unreasoning resentments. For instance, I know a young woman who is most indignant because the conductor will not let her get off a car before it stops. She is a very athletic young woman and knows enough to swing off in the right direction. She is no more likely, she claims, to lose her balance than a man. And when the conductor puts up his arm and bars her from approaching the steps while the car is in motion, she is most indignant with him. She cannot seem to realize that the conductor is not to blame for not knowing as much about her as she knows about herself. What the conductor knows is, that if she should get off and should come to any harm he would be blamed. Naturally he doesn't want to run any such risk.

She Is Only Safeguarding Her Own Account. Another, and to me the most exasperating form of this unreasonable-ness is the resentment of the woman who has a charge account at a shop where coins are used to safeguard the accounts, and who objects when the clerk will not let her take some expensive purchases when she has left her identification coin at home. Does she want other women using her name and charging items on her account? Certainly not. Then why can't she understand that she must help safeguard that account?

It is absolutely impossible that these casual people with whom you come in contact should know as much about you as you know about yourself. You are only part of the public and must be treated as an average man or woman. To ask for different treatment is to show a childishness, a lack of reasoning power that an adult ought to be ashamed of.

AS OLD AS YOU FEEL.

A woman is as old as she feels—goes the old adage. Sometimes she feels about ninety, so the adage proves to be only an expression, but not a rule, figuratively speaking.

There are many ways, and indeed simple ways for the woman of today to remain young. Until we are twenty nature takes care of our appearance, but in later life we must take some of the responsibility on our own shoulders.

The half hour beauty nap every afternoon is the first aid to an unwrinkled youthful face.

A brisk walk in the fresh air, with lungs inhaling the pure oxygen, and the mind absorbing the beauties of the surroundings is the second aid to youth.

The third aid is the nightly warm bath. Supply yourself with a body brush as well as a face brush and rub vigorously every bit of the cuticle on your body, until it reaches a pink glow. Then immediately after the bath, curl into your warm bed for an eight hours unbroken sleep.

Try these simple remedies and be convinced that youth has not deserted you even when you have turned the forty year stone.

When you want something in a hurry for tea, go to ELLIS'—Head Cheese, Ox Tongue, Boiled Ham, Cooked Corned Beef, Bologna Sausage.

A light supper dish is cheese sandwiches tried to a golden brown in hot butter.

Just Folks

Names and Faces.

I do not ask a store of wealth Nor special gifts of power.

I hope always for strength and health To brave each troubled hour.

But life would be distinctly good However low my place is.

Had I a memory that could Remember names and faces.

I am not troubled by the fact That common skill is mine— I care not that my life has lacked The glory of the fine.

But, oh, when someone speaks to me, My cheeks grow red with shame Because I'm sure that he must see That I have lost his name.

Embarrassment, where'er I go, Pursues me, night and day, I hear some good friend's glad "Hello."

And stop a word to say, His voice melodiously may ring, But that's all lost on me, For all the time I'm wondering Whoever can it be.

I envy no man's talent rare Save his who can repeat The names of men, no matter where It is they chance to meet.

For he escapes the bitter blow, The sorrow and regret, Of greeting friends he ought to know As though they'd never met.

I do not ask a store of gold, High station here, or fame; I have a burning wish to hold The popular acclaim;

Life's lanes I'd gladly journey through, Nor mind the stony places, Could I but do as others do And know men's names and faces!

Put a large brick in the oven in case of sudden illness when heat may be required at any moment. Wrapped in a newspaper it will retain its warmth longer than the ordinary water-bottle.

One of the most remarkable sieges in history was that of 1779-83, when General Elliot successfully held the Rock of Gibraltar for three years and seven months against the combined French and Spanish forces.

Although the sea covers three-fourths of the earth's surface, it does not provide in the same proportion for man's wants. Only about 3 per cent of the people in the world gain their living directly from the sea.

The great armadillo has the greatest number of teeth. Whereas the normal number of teeth is thirty-two, this animal has from ninety-two to a hundred; twenty-four to twenty-six in each side of the upper jaw, and twenty-two to twenty-four in each side of the lower jaw—all molars. Next to the great armadillo in this respect comes the ant-eater of Western Australia, with fifty-two teeth.

Fast days in Russia are numerous. Besides the ordinary Lenten period, which, however, in Russia lasts forty-eight days instead of forty, they have three shorter periods of fasting—one of nineteen days in June, one of fourteen days in August, and another of thirty-three days in November and December. There are, in addition, three single days of fasting, of which two are also holidays.

Press Briefs.

A Small Legal Fight.—Of the 28 members of the British cabinet, only six are lawyers—an unusually small proportion.—Hamilton Herald.

Or the Peace Conference.—The new Germany would no doubt like "to get into society"—especially the Society of Nations.—Quebec Telegraph.

The Holy Ones.—We would certainly hate to be like some people who feel so holy they refer to sinners as "they" and saints as "we."—Corder's Journal.

Not at the End Yet.—It now begins to look as though the Bolshevik might go to war against each other. Give them enough rope, you know.—Quebec Telegraph.

To Shoot Them Down.—It would be a fine thing if they could bring a few of the anti-aircraft guns home from France to help shoot down some of the high prices.—Douglas Herald.

All Alone.—Herr Hohenzollern is probably the only man in the world out of a job to whom a sympathetic strike of affiliated workers must seem hopeless.—New York World.

Halves.—Washington is to mobilize thousands of secret service agents to enforce prohibition. That means the man with a bottle will have to divide it.—New York Telegram.

Put up the Cash First.—Apparently there are good markets for Canadian products in Roumania and Siberia. All that is needed is some assurance that Roumania and Serbia will pay for them.—Toronto Globe.

Will Have to.—It is perfectly safe to predict that the Germans will accept such new terms of armistice as the Allies require, primarily because they have not yet complied in full with the terms to which they assented Nov. 11, 1918.—New York World.

All Guilty.—We do not believe that one thousand innocent bystanders were killed in Berlin, as a recent news report had it. There are not that many innocent persons in all Germany.—Joplin News Herald.

THE KINGS.

"We kings must stick together," said Bill, upon a time, "through every kind of weather, through every brand of crime. By heaven 'tis appointed that all the crowned galoats, with rancid oil anointed should travel in cahoots. To all kings I am brother; we'll soon be going lame, if we don't back each other, and play each other's game." Then many kings were reigning some fourteen hours a day, and all of them were straining to make the business pay. I saw them blithely kinging, some five brief years ago; and they were dancing, singing, and romping to and fro. Each had his role of ermine, each was a gaudy cuss, the Austrian, the German, the Bulgarian and the Russ. I have no space to mention all kings who frolicked then, each with a high intention to boss his fellowmen. And now the kings are scattered and some of them are dead, the snags they had are shattered, their swords with rust are red. They did not stick together, they made some ghastly breaks; each tanned his private leather, each killed his private snakes. And now the king anointed with mica axle grease, find all the world disjointed, and can't enjoy our peace.

NAVAL TONNAGE LOSS.

LONDON, Mar. 3. (Via Reuters' Ottawa Agency.)—

total Allied Naval losses in the aggregated 807,000 tons, according to an estimate sent by Reuters' correspondent. Of this loss, the British portion was 550,000 tons.

Central Powers lost 415,000 tons, but the German total which was 400 tons does not cover the huge tonnage surrendered under the armistice terms.

Commenting upon the estimates, the Westminster Gazette says that although the figures given are not official, they may be taken as closely approaching the losses suffered by the chief belligerents in the war. "When we learn that in big ships alone, we lost thirteen battleships, three cruisers and twenty-five destroyers," says the newspaper, "we get a notion of the tremendous character of the effort which was necessary to enable the Navy to emerge from the war vastly more powerful than it was at the end of 1914."
