LONDON, SATURDAY, AUG. 2.

CANADA AND THE NEW UNITED STATES TARIFF.

Within a few days a sweeping measure of tariff reduction will have been enacted in the United States. The mutiny in the Democratic ranks in Congress appears to be confined to the two senators from Louisiana, who are the mouthpieces of the sugar business. Their opposition merely serves to exhibit in a stronger light the naked selfishness of high protection. They represent a single interest and a single locality. For the sake of these they will vote against the reduction of taxation on thousands of commodities, and against their party and its historic policy.

Contrary to public expectation, the changes made in the bill by the Senate majority have been downward, not upward. The free list has been extended, and includes these products, nearly all of which Canada exports:

Biscuits, bread, buckwheat, flour of buckwheat, cocoa, coffee, cornmeal, fresh eggs, fresh water fish, and lard substitutes, lemon and lime juice, meats (including fresh beef, veal, mutton, lamb, pork, bacon and ham), prepared and preserved meats, live stock (including cattle, sheep, lambs and swine), rye and rye flour, sugar, salt, seed, shrimps, lobster and other shell-fish, tea, tobacco, wheat and wheat flour.

There are some important qualifications. Wheat will be taxed 10 cents a bushel, wheat flour 45 cents a barrel, and potatoes 10 per cent, ad valorem, if imported from countries which impose a tax on United States wheat, flour and potatoes. The wheat tax will therefore remain against Canada, though reduced from 25 to 10 cents a bushel, unless the Borden Government sees fit to give the Canadian wheat growers the advantage of a free American market by striking off Canada's useless duty of 12 cents a bushel. In addition to the free list the duties on other foodstuffs in the bill before Congress have been much reduced, as follows:

Barley, 15 cents per bushel, and 1 cent a pound on peeled or hulled oats, 6 cents a bushel, and 33 cents per hundredweight for rolled oats; rice, 1 cent a pound; biscuits or bread containing chocolate, nuts or confectionery, 25 per cent; butter and butter substitutes, 2½ cents per pound; cheese and substitutes, 2½ cents per pound; vegetables, fresh 15 per cent, preserved 25 per cent; honey, 10 cents per gallon; peas, 10 cents per bushel, green or dried; lentils and beans, 25 cents per bushel.

The Canadian Government at least should give the western farmers the boon of a free American market for their wheat, but the Government is stultified by the anti-reciprocity campaign.

The powers that be cannot consistently bring about the free exchange of wheat after preaching that it would disrupt Confederation. On this theory, a partial disruption is about to happen, as the reduction of the American duty from 25 to 10 cents a bushel will greatly stimulate exports from Canada to the United States, thus dealing a blow at that galladium of our independence, the east-and-west haul.

In respect to live stock, meats and other foodstuffs, the farmers of Eastern Canada will profit greatly by the schedules of the present bill, if these are applied to this country, but there is a fear that the favors will be denied to her under a rider to the bill, which empowers the executive to retain duties against countries which tax American foodstuffs. Even if Canada is put on a footing of equality with other food-producing countries, it must share with them the privileges of the American market, of which the reciprocity agreement would have given her the monopoly. If the retaliatory clause continues to shut her out, the demand in this country for tariff legislation which will unlock the door of the United States will be such as no Government can resist.

IS IT POSSIBLE?

It is necessary sometimes to go away from home for news. The London (Eng.), correspondent of the Manchester Guardian writes that Mr. Borden has at last decided to trust his fortunes to a general election on the issue of his naval policy. It is intimated that he has come to this decision because he has been advised by those in authority that he must not expect the Imperial Government to make any change in the British America act so as to enable him to get a Senate that shall act conformable to his wishes.

The Guardian is an unusually well-informed paper, and what it gives out is entitled to some consideration. It may, therefore, be just possible that it is correctly informed as to Mr. Borden's intentions. It is more likely, however, that it is only judging Mr. Borden by British standards of statesmanship. It may have reason to know that the Imperial Government has given him to understand there will be no alteration of the Senate allowed to meet his present emergency. And knowing this, the Guardian jumps to the conclusion that the logical result will be a general election in Canada. If Mr. Borden cannot get the Senate so modified that he can pass his naval bill; if he honestly believes that it is absolutely necessary in the interests of the empire that his $35,000,000 Dreadnoughts without delay; and if he believes the Canadian people are ready to endorse his policy now, then there certainly would be a general election. For, if the result was favorable the money would be at once forthcoming.

But that is not the situation by any means. Mr. Borden knows perfectly well that there is no urgent necessity for adding three Canadian Dreadnoughts to the British navy. In the next place he is not at all anxious to spend the money. The indefinite postponement of the contribution is what will suit best his Nationalist allies; it is what they have already suggested as the intended course of the Government. By passing through the House his bill providing for the contribution he placates the imperialist wing of his party; by having the actual expenditure of the money indefinitely postponed he satisfies the Nationalist wing, and enables Pelletier and Co. to go back to their constituents and say, "We told you so."

Finally, even if the so-called emergency were a fact instead of a fiction, and even if Mr. Borden honestly wished to contribute the money right away, he evidently has grave doubts as to the result of an election, and has no desire to take chances. The Government is safe for two or three years more, if there is no election. The Conservative members of Parliament are all safe for the same reason. No doubt they prefer to hold on to the goods they have rather than risk losing all.

We fear the Guardian's expectation of a general election in Canada is based on logic and on British practice, and not on actual knowledge. It will learn in time that a Conservative Government in this Dominion has very little regard for British ideas when they are inconvenient, and that the only logical procedure it ever follows is the procedure that will attain and retain office.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH.

There have been a few cases lately in some of our larger cities that seem to indicate a lack of knowledge on the part of certain classes of an essential feature of the British system of government—the right of free speech. In Montreal, some Adventists have been trying to hold public meetings and have required police protection. It is possible the hoodlums who are figuring in this case belong to the same gang that assaulted the secretary of the Dominion Alliance a short time ago. Then in Toronto, a converted Jew who was preaching in the Jewish quarter, was the subject of a similar unpleasant experience.

It should be understood that in this country every man has a right to the free expression of his opinion in public, so long as he does not advocate anything contrary to law and good morals. If we do not approve of what he says, we can pass on, and not listen to him. If he says what he should not say, the police will look after him. To mob a man because he preaches a religion of which we do not approve is un-British. And it is unwise, because martyrdom is a great stimulus to any doctrine, whether civil or religious. If the doctrine is false, keep away from it, and it will probably die of itself. Throw brick-bats at the preacher and it receives more good than harm.

In the Toronto case a Jewish paper tries to excuse the rioters on the ground that the man assaulted was a Jew who had turned Christian, and who was especially obnoxious to his audience because he was looked on as a traitor to his people and his religion, and was using language that they considered insulting. That is an explanation, but not an excuse. Whenever a man changes his religion his former associates are disposed to call him a traitor, to despise, and to detest him. It is perhaps natural. If a Catholic priest become a Protestant he must expect that Catholics will have far less toleration for him than they would for one who had always been a Protestant. Reverse the conditions: let a Protestant become a Catholic, and the result is the same. But that does not justify assaulting the convert, or the convert, if that term is more suitable. The converted Catholic, or Protestant, or Jew, has a perfect right to preach his new religion to those who still believe in the theology he has discarded.

It is the most natural thing that he should want to do so, he is sincere. Converted from what he now considers to be a false religion, his first thought will be for those he has left behind him. The burden of their spiritual welfare rests more heavily on his shoulders than that of other people. He wants to save his old associates from the danger he has escaped, and give them the benefit of the blessings he has received. Whether it is the wisest thing for him to do, may be a question. While human nature remains what it is, he is the missionary least acceptable. The preacher is even more obnoxious than his doctrine. Personal prejudice will weaken his appeal, and render his arguments futile. And it will be all the worse from the tendency of the convert to be more radical and aggressive in his language. He is very apt to pay more attention to the falsehood of the doctrine he has rejected than to the truth of the one he has adopted.

But whether or not it is wise for a convert to start preaching to his old co-religionists, the fact remains that he has a perfect right to do so, and should be protected in that right. Everyone should be made to understand that fact. It may be quite true that those who undertake to defend their faith by physical violence are of the very lowest class, who know very little about the religion they profess, and practice less than they know. All the greater responsibility rests on the better informed to keep them in subjection as far as possible, and not to wink at their disorderly conduct.

What news? Crops pretty fair?
How do you like this rainy spell?
Wife well now? Take a chair."

REFORM DUE TO TIGHT SKIRTS.
[That awful skirt—car step, the enemy of the tight skirt, is to be abolished. The glad news was proclaimed yesterday by the Chicago railways company. The company has waited in vain for the fashion to change, but it seems that the tight skirt has come to stay, and even appears to have become tighter. Accordingly the cars will have to be changed instead.

The hundred new cars will be placed in operation by the railways company in the fall, and the present set of 16½ inches will be reduced to 12½ inches. This will be made possible by the use of 32-inch instead of 34-inch driving wheels. The two chairs will be lopped off the second step, and one from the third, making the total climb to the floor of the car 32½ inches instead of 40½ inches.

The lopping off of the single entrance pay-as-you-enter type, but the entrance and exit will be in the middle of the side of the car instead of at one end, as in the case of the new cars on the south side, which have proved more or less of a failure for handling large crowds.

CULTIVATE SAND WASTES OF NORFOLK COUNTY

Government Experts To Investigate the Reforestation Possibilities.

Toronto, Aug. 2.—Important announcements are expected shortly from Hon. W. H. Hearst, minister of lands, forests and mines, in connection with the reforestation policy of the Ontario Government. Mr. Hearst, along with Hon. James S. Duff and Prof. Zavitz, forestry expert, will inspect the nurseries in Norfolk County on Monday with a view to determining just what line will be taken by the department to carry out this policy.

At the present time the Norfolk nurseries are providing seedlings of Scotch pine to municipalities, farmers and park commissions without charge. Large sandy areas throughout the western peninsula have been lying waste for years, and the facilities offered by this branch of the service are designed to bring these wastes under cultivation, prevent sand drifting and help along the growth of timber in old Ontario.

Prof. Zavitz has been preparing data for some time with reference to a fixed policy that should be followed in the selection of seedlings. The first-hand information as to what is in the ground and ready to take more active steps another year. In the meantime a survey will be made as to the possible use of the timber resources of the Province to enable the minister to decide along what lines efforts should be directed.

Instead of 100,000 horsepower, the Ontario hydro will have 200,000 or 250,000 in the near future.

The transmission lines will be improved in every way possible—duplicated if need be—and this time next year will see a larger use of hydro power than is the case today, although this act can be called into requisition if necessary.

While the hydro has gone ahead, experiments have been made from time to time. Aluminum cable is used on the transmission wire lines, but the commission is testing copper cable and steel-reinforced aluminum as well.

Four Arrested For Intimidating Miners

Men Are Gradually Getting Back to Work in Calumet.

[Canadian Press.]
Calumet, Mich., Aug. 2.—There was increased activity in the copper mining operations today as a sequel to an ultimatum conveyed to the operators from state sources that another week might end the participation of troops in the strike situation. All men applying for work were given tasks of some sort in order to hold their interest until actual mining is attempted.

Four arrests in the early hours were made for alleged intimidation. One of the latest prisoners was Victor Brandt, said to be an organizer of the Western Federation of Miners, who said he came from Duluth. There was the usual amount of shadow shooting by sentries during the night, and the men being curious to test the "kick" of the short-range ammunition with which they had been supplied. Continued absence of extended rioting, and the fact that the annual meeting of the Michigan troops draws the men from their usual rotations were factors in determining the state authorities to limit the stay of the soldiers. Another, of probably greater importance, is the expense to which the state is put to maintain the camps.

Head of Trappists Is Dead at Oka

[Canadian Press.]
Montreal, Aug. 2.—Growing so weak towards the end that the pious Trappist rule that every member of the order shall die on the floor amid sackcloth and ashes was for once dispensed with by Rev. Dom Antoine Guger, O. C. S. B., famous head of Canada's most picturesque branch of the Trappist Order, died at Oka last night. His death for weeks was regarded as being only a matter of hours, but the night of his death he was found lying on his back, his body cold, and his spirit within the final body fought off for days the final passing. Two weeks ago he was carried on his bed into the monastery chapel to witness the religious exercises attendant upon the celebration of the feast of Our Lady of Mount Carmel. He was named the first mitred abbot of the monastery in 1902.

REQUEST FOR $100,000 TO HELP AMERICANS LEAVE

Bryan Says His Plan Has Nothing to Do With General Policy.

Washington, Aug. 2.—Secretary of State Bryan today vigorously disclaimed that his request to Congress to appropriate $100,000 for assisting destitute Americans out of Mexico had any connection with any policy the Administration may evolve in dealing with the Mexican situation.

"Statements attempting to put a scare-head on construction upon the request for an appropriation are entirely without excuse, and cannot be explained upon any theory consistent with an interest in the public welfare," said he. "A trustworthy aid to any indigent person desiring to leave Mexico, the Government is simply doing what it does at any time when American lives are in danger by insurrection, and there is no reason why anybody should attempt to misconstrue it."

Non-Interference.

Mr. Bryan's move, however, was generally interpreted as one step in the Administration's plan for dealing with the Mexican problem.

Far from being regarded as a preliminary to intervention—which President Wilson has repeatedly said he has no intention of doing—the request for funds is really thought to be the forerunner of a policy of non-interference.

The Administration, while hopeful that peace negotiations may bring the two factions to a suspension of hostilities, realizes that with the resignation of Huerta or any other political change, Americans may become alarmed, and the desire to obtain funds with which to care for those who may be anxious to leave Mexico is a precautionary measure.

To Keep Skin in Fine Condition in Summer

[From the Family Physician.]
It would be much better for the skin if little cream, powder or rouge were used during the heated term. Mixed with perspiration, dirt and grime, these things do nothing but beautify. Ordinary mercerized wax will do more for the complexion, and without giving an oily, shiny, streaked spot or pale appearance. It is the ideal application for the season, as it not only keeps the pores clean but daily removes particles of scurf and dirt. It has been sold by dirt or weather. By constantly keeping the complexion clear, white and satiny, does more toward perpetuating a youthful countenance than any of the arts or artifices commonly employed. One ounce of mercerized wax, obtainable at any drug store, will completely renovate the worst complexion. It is applied at night like cold cream and washed off in the morning.

To keep the skin from sagging or wrinkling, or to overcome such condition, there's nothing better than a face bath made by dissolving 1 ounce of powdered axolite in 1 pint witch hazel.

Refuse to Return Fearing Accident

Five Hundred Men Are Out on Strike at Superior.

[Canadian Press.]
Superior, Wis., Aug. 2.—Barrage over the accident Thursday evening when two of their fellows lost the lives and several others were injured, 500 men employed on the Alcoa docks at West Superior, who have been on a strike since the accident, refused to resume work until conditions which they claim caused the accident are removed.

During the day yesterday eleven trains of ore reached the docks, and more will arrive today, and it is but a question of time when the mine will have to shut down for want of cars.

Seven ore boats are tied to the docks or anchored waiting to be filled. Many more are due to arrive within the next 48 hours. Two partly loaded boats moved to Missabe docks yesterday to complete their cargo.

The strikers yesterday asked the times for a hearing. At the third appeal they were granted a
