The police "blotters" show no diminution in the humbers of arrests for drunkenness, but rather the reverse. An impartial observer who inquires into the causes of these effects will be constrained to causes of these effects will be constrained to the conclusion that the bylaw has given the surviving license-holders the trade of the decapitated seventy four, and by herding the drinking classes together, has promoted the preating habit. Any man who knows any-thing of how this habit affects drinking men knows that the bigger the crowd the more numerous the freats, and per consequence the larger the percentage of drunks. This may account for the present wave of inebration.
