"The Best in the Old world and the Best in the New are Ours."

The best in the old world and the best in the new one are ours. As Wordsworth says :

"In everything we are spring of Earth's first blood,—have littles manifold."

There is hardly a great work of art in all of Europe which does not suggest the creative power of the Church, and no great work which does not speak of her fortesting come. fostering care. If a Pope of the Renaissance hesitated to punish Benevennto Cellini for a murder he committed in hot blood,—perhaps in self de-fense,—who shall blame him? Out of live forever. And this one was Cellini. To have cut short his life would have deprived the world of things of beauty which are joys forever. The Pope, temporal ruler of Rome, hesitated and his art saved Cellini.

Earlier than the time of Cellini, a saint founded Italian art and literature. This saint, who did for the Italian language what Chaucer was later to do for the English, was one of the strongest, yet most delicate characters the world has ever known. He was a poet and beggar, a king among men, and yet a little child,— a fool for Christ's sake, yet so wise and powerful that he created the sweetest language on earth, and inspired a great poet and made the greatest epic the world has ever known possible.

When I say the greatest epic, I mean the greatest poem not found in the Sa-ered Scriptures. There is no epic greater than the Book of Job.

The man who was the prototype of Dante and who gave high thoughts to Giotto, was Francis of Assisi. It was a saint, of whom the Church gave her show work. THE CAN. gave the first impulse to Italian literature 763 Craig St. and Italian art. St. Francis spiritualized and humanized both.

Italian art, which gave true art to all the world was at once raised to Heaven and brought to earth by St. Francis acting as Giotto. The period into which St. decaying religious spirit of the period was hideous. The stiff augular Byzanwas hideous. tine influence was over it all: devotien to the Madonna was shown by covering and unhaman, bad its effect on the first Florentine, Cimabue, the dim morning star of Italian art and the patron of Gitto. But Giotto, the little shepof Gitto. But Giotto, the little shep-herd, who had seen nature with innocent eyes, caugh the spirit of St. Francis. He gave the modern Modennas a likeness to the Mether Herself, seeing them, the world could easily believe that man was made after the image of God. He, following his dear St. Franc's, made the three virtues. Poverty, Chastity, and Obedience live, as St. Francis in d made them live. And from him,—the real founder of Florentine art,—a reger-erated art sprang, "Truly in those days."

books was well compensated when the Bible lay spread on the walls of the churches." St. Francis gave the Christian world the first Christmas crib. He showed the children whom he loved the light of the little child Jesus, adored by the animals which he likewise loved. And children and animals loved him in return; and this love was wonderful in a brutal age. Giotto understood it; and thousand- of devout souls, thirsting for fresh springs of life, understood it. Pope Innocent, seemingly alone in chaos, doubted that men without a home, except a ruined chapel, could change the world by becoming so poor that nobody would steal from them. They were to beg only to give away what they begged. But a light from Heaven shone the Pope, and he consented to the founding of an order devoted to Poverty, -Poverty utter and unrelieved,-at a time when people were even fonder of money than they are to-day,-if such a thing cen be imagined.

And Francis, blessed by the Pope loved hif fellow-men and his Lady Poverty, like Dante and Petrarch and the Chevalier Bayard, he had also a starlike lady whom he loved at a distance after the chivalric manner of the time; he changed the face of Europe; he showed charity and chastity; and his "Canticle of the Sun," was the first poem sung in the Italian language. The "Canticle of the Sun," a burst of exulted and innocent love for our Lord and His children, was the foundation stone of the marvellous "Divine Comedy" of Dante.

Shall we complain that there is a dearth of Catholic literature when the most Christian of all poems is open to us? In my last paper I mentioned four translations, three by Americans, open to us all. And there is Dr. Hettinger's book on Dante, printed by the Catholic Publication Society Co., of New York, which, carefully read, is the best possible key to Dante. And one can get a good photograph from Boston of the Disputa, with Dante among the Doctors of the Church. As for the "Fioretti of St. Francis," a little book that has become a classic, who would be without it, when one is not obliged to learn Italian, in order to read it? translations, three by Americans, open order to read it?

St. Francis, by uniting the spiritual parted the secret. On Dec. 20, 1817, in and human in a bond of fiery love, the parish of Clanduff, county Down, Ireheiped to give the world its greatest poet land, the Bishop first saw the light of and to form a new school of art. Giotto day. His parents didn't have an abund-influenced Fra Angelico and Botticelli ance of this world's goods. They came and Raffaella; and Dante gave inspirato the United States when their son was tion to Chancer and every poet from Spencer to Longfellow.

Mr. Gillmor occupied this important office from the time of Confederation to within a few weeks ago, when he retired to assume the duties of deputy tientenant-governor, an appointment rendered necessary by the serious illness of Sir Alexander Campbell. Mr. Gillmor was an able and popular official. He was for some years commanding officer of the Queen's Own Rifles, and always took an interest in militia affairs. He gave a number of cups and prizes to the Ontario Rifle association, the Gillmor match at the annual meeting of the association being named in his honor.

A Significant ffint.

No little comment has been occasioned by the action to-day of a majority of the niembers of the corporation of the city of Dublin. A meeting of that body had been fixed for Jan. 4th, the object being to draft an address of congratulation to the Queen upon the the approaching marriage of her grandson, the Duke of Clarence and Avondale, to Princess Mary of Teck. When the time for opening the meeting came around it was found that not enough of members were present to prices, salesmen have been booking large form a quorum. These in attendance and numerous orders, measurers, cutters waited for some time but none of the abland fitters overrun with pressing desentees presented themselves and consequently no meeting could be held. Of course it is not positively known why so the tout ensemble presents an assurance many members of the corporation found of the purchasing capacity of the public it impossible to attend the meeting, but when prices reach a point below the there is strong suspicion that they think the marriage of the Duke of Clarence is not an occasion calling upon them to extend their congratulations to the Queen.
