THE TRUSTS IN THE STATES.

In their weekly financial review, Henry Clews & Co., of New York, discussing stock speculation and investment, say:

There are no elements outside the stock situation proper to encourage distrust about the continued strength of the market. There is no longer any prospective stringency in the local money market; on the contrary, the interest and dividend disbursements of the Treasury and corporations and the return of money sent to the interior through the Fall months will produce an easy money market for the next three months. The evidences of business activity abound on every hand; the condition of the crops holds out, at the moment, the promise of a good harvest; our surplus of exportable staples and of manufactured products keeps up the extraordinary rate of increase that has prevailed for the last three years; in fact, while the imports are kept comparatively low, our foreign shipments are all the time going ahead of our most sanguine expectations. At the same time, the industrial interests have seen and measured the great "trust" undertakings born in the last two or three years, and are not alarmed at them. They see plenty of room for investment of their own capitals; and find nothing to fear from the special powers and working facilities from which the "trusts" have expected so much and of which they have boasted so much. They are equipping themselves with the newest and best plants, and their capitals are equal to all the wants of economical working.

This entry of independent industrialists into the field is taking place upon an entirely extraordinary scale, and that immediately upon the creation of industrial consolidation, capitalized at $2,500,000,000. This settles the future status of the trusts. It shows that they must give up all pretensions to monopoly and bring themselves to face as formidable a competition as that which drove them to seek shelter under the policy of consolidation. The really important significance of all this is, however, that this new reinforcement of independent industrial organization means a coming vast expansion of our manufacturing industries. Our ever-growing accumulations of capital can find no other employment; and monopolies are mere toys in the presence of such an overwhelming force of free capital.
