

Wolfe's Birthplace Honors Hero's Memory

To the victor of Quebec, whose death on the field of battle together with that of his foe, Montcalm, is one of the striking tragedies of New World warfare, has just been erected a fine bronze statue at his birthplace, Westerham, Kent, England. The statue, which is the work of F. Derwent Wood, represents the young General moving forward with uplifted sword at the moment before he was struck by the fatal bullet on the Heights of Abraham. The monument was unveiled by Lord Roberts, who is seen at the left.
