

$3.5 million to the UNAIDS program and expects to make a similar contribution in 1997-98. CIDA and Health Canada contribute jointly to the global fight against tuberculosis.

For the latest five-year funding period (1993-98), the Canadian government, through Health Canada, will have allocated $203.5 million to Canada's National AIDS Strategy, or $40.7 million annually. Almost half of the annual amount ($17.8 million) was earmarked for research and monitoring.