THE VACANT LEADERSHIP
An Absorbing Topic of Discussion
by British Liberals.

A Wide-Awake Sentinel Too Sharp for the Kaiser.

William Declines to Write for a New York "Yellow" Newspaper—Small Wages of Laborers in India.

New York, Jan. 1.—Mr. Ford, cabling to the Tribune from London, refers to the vacant Liberal leadership in the house as follows: The Liberal members of parliament are deep in back-stairs politics over the vacant leadership of the House of Commons. Mr. Labouchere assumes that Mr. Asquith will be the official candidate, although he himself prefers Mr. Herbert Gladstone. There is nothing like a full poll of Liberal members, although the whips are quietly canvassing for the first and second choices. Well-informed Liberals assert that when parliament meets there will be no contest, but only one candidate, and he an unwilling one, dragged into harness. There are rumors that the preliminary meeting will be held at Lord Rosebery's house, but this seems unlikely, when there is a general agreement that the leadership of the whole party should be left open, and the successor of Sir William Harcourt quietly chosen with as little disturbance as possible. Men like Mr. Labouchere favor the reduction of the party platform to a single issue, like the abolition of the veto power in the House of Lords. Shrewder observers maintain that the success of an is unlikely without popular agitation, and that no signal for such agitation can be given while the Unionists remain in power. Some of the most thoughtful Liberals affirm that Lord Rosebery's great mistake was his neglect when in office to have a bill sent up to the upper house to allow any member to move the upper house to sit in the lower whenever they desired to do so. They believe that this will be an effective way of allowing Lord Rosebery to lead the party in the commons, and compelling the Unionists to consent to some scheme for mending rather than ending the House of Lords. Meanwhile, Sir William Harcourt is winding up the ritual debate in a temperate tone, but with clear perception of the truth, that he has played an important part in forcing sluggish bishops to put an end to lawless acts within the English Church. He has been reviled for dragging religion into politics, and lampooned as though he were another Kenseit. Time has brought his vindication to the resolute stand made by the bishops to enforce the law within the church. The Archbishop of Canterbury has done more than any body else to restore peace in the distracted church and rescue the establishment from public agitation. He has cleared the air by defining what is legal and illegal doctrine and practice, and has earned the reputation of being the most statesmanlike Anglican primate of the Victorian reign.

A WIDE-AWAKE SENTINEL.

A story is afloat that the Kaiser, in the course of last week had been busy making surprise visits. As the story came, he appeared at midnight to the sentinels at the New Palace, and asked one of the guards, after wishing him a merry Christmas and happy New Year, to accept a present, at the same time producing a 5-mark piece. The guard, however, knew his book. He said that the emperor's orders forbade him to accept the present, but the coin could be deposited upon the pedestal of a near-by statue, as there was no order existing which forbade his picking up a coin. The Kaiser took the hint and walked away laughing.

PECULIAR JUDICIAL DECISIONS.

Some peculiar judicial decisions have been recently recorded in Germany. At Koeswig a paver, who had buried his father, after the clergyman and the children went away, remained beside the grave and exclaimed: "Farwell! We shall never see each other again in this life." The judge declared that such words, spoken aloud in public, were a nuisance, as they shocked the religious feelings of the hearers, and were contrary to the church doctrine of the immortality of the soul, suggesting that there is no such thing as a resurrection. The paver got a sentence of two weeks' imprisonment in jail for impiety.

REFUSED A $5,000 CHECK.

The London Observer's Berlin correspondent voices for the story that the emperor recently received a check from New York for $5,000, with the request that his majesty write an article giving his views on the Spanish-American war. The emperor returned the check through the German embassy at Washington, saying that he had neither the time nor inclination to begin a journalistic career.

THE LABORERS IN INDIA LIVE ON LITTLE.

United States Consul Patterson, at Calcutta, has supplied statistics relating to the cost of subsistence of laborers in India, that exhibit in a striking manner the extreme economy practiced by the natives. His tables show that the highest wages paid for skilled labor is $4.50 per month for jute mill hands, while $1.80 is the monthly wage of able-bodied agricultural laborers. But the consul says that in Northwest India wages are much lower than the figures quoted. The laborers live altogether on grain, using about one and one-half pounds per day each, costing on an average from 2 1/2 to 3 cents. Yet with this food they do the hardest kind of manual labor, and keep their muscles well developed, their endurance in carrying heavy loads being remarkable. A majority of the laborers not only exist on these small wages, but manage to keep families and save money.

BRITISH REVENUES.

The revenue of the United Kingdom for the quarter ending Dec. 31 was $13,161,670, an increase of $4,313,810 over 1897, making for the nine months a total of $391,702,340, an increase of $4,371,740.

AFRICA'S GOLD OUTPUT.

The Rothschilds, acting chiefly on the advice of Mr. John Hay Hammond, the American engineer who was in prison, sentenced to death, and subsequently reprieved and released on the payment of a heavy fine for connection with the Johannesburg troubles at the time of the Jameson raid, have entered into gold mining on the west coast of Africa, which they believe to be one of the greatest of the world's fields. They have sent a force of engineers there under the leadership of a young Californian named Hoffman, and prospecting work will be conducted on a scientific basis. Hammond predicts that Africa's gold output next year will be $100,000,000, which is said to be far beyond California's high-water mark.

DISCONTENTED OUTLANDERS

Failure of Transvaal Journals to Create a Flurry.

Henry Norman Takes a Serious View of the Situation.

Report of a Big Battle in China.

Welcoming the New Year—The Mad King Otto Dying—Russian Railway Scheme—Missing boats found.

Mr. Ford, the London correspondent of the New York Tribune, cabling today regarding affairs in the Transvaal, says: "The efforts of several journals to magnify the last flurry of discontent have failed. President Kruger is known to be conciliatory, and while there is injustice in Boer dealings with the Uitlanders, there is no immediate method of redress. Jameson and Rhodes, between them, have paralyzed the colonial office for a long time to come. The franchise would have been given by this time if there had been no lawless invasion of the Transvaal. Mining business in the Transvaal has greatly improved during the year, and political agitation is the last thing which British investors want in that quarter. Besides, as The Spectator reads the lesson in an impressive tone today, the united English-speaking race, while equal to the rest of the world, must govern with justice, mercy and moderation."

A SERIOUS VIEW

Mr. Norman, in his cabled letter to the New York Times, takes a more serious view of the situation. Mr. Norman says: "The killing of an Englishman by a Boer policeman has been in itself serious. It is a brutal exercise of authority in the presence of a rather disrespectful row; but the attitude of the Boer papers during the week show clearly how explosive a situation there is."

President Kruger has expressed indignation at the abominable utterances of some of these papers, but telegraphed that the relations between the Boers and the Uitlanders is once more strained to the breaking point. As an example of the Boer treatment of foreigners, a nameless London county councillor, just returned, says that when the train arrived in Johannesburg he saw a Boer officer helping himself to the contents of his baggage, even before it was taken from the car. He protested, and the Boer, who was rather handsomely dressed, and told that he was a Boer, must be taught how to behave themselves.

TEMPER OF THE BOERS.

"As I hinted in a previous letter, it is pretty certain that unless a reform comes from the Boer side, another twelve months will not pass without interference from British troops. As the Boers have put 20,000 men in the field, and have acquired enormous quantities of war material, the impending effort will be no slight one. The feeling in the British army in this matter may be guessed from the fact that the English travelers are frequently shown by the Boers, tunics and kilts of the British regiments hung as trophies over the fireplace. Any man of the 200,000 American volunteers can say how he would feel under similar circumstances, when the ill-fortune of war was turned into an insult."

DESTRUCTION OF AN OLD PARK THREATENED.

London has been somewhat excited this week over the proposed destruction of Richmond Park, one of the most picturesque and beautiful parks in England. The park authorities marked an immense old track of the royal demesne to be cut down and sold. Protest has been made to the Duke of Cambridge, who is park ranger, and there has been a strenuous effort to protect the historic old trees from the hands of the cutter.

BIG BATTLE IN CHINA.

The Chung King correspondent of the North China Daily News telegraphs under date of Dec. 31 that a great battle has taken place at Schiotobany. The engagement is said to have taken place on Dec. 27, and imperial troops are said to have been victorious. Schiotobany cannot be located on the maps, but Chun King, from whence the news comes, is situated in the Szechuan Province, part of which has been in a state of rebellion for a long time past, and which is overrun with marauders. The latest advices from there said 1,000 rebels were marching on Chun King, and that 300 imperial Chinese troops had gone to meet them. It was said that the militia was being mobilized. A British missionary, Mr. Fleming, was murdered at Pang Hui, in Kweichow, a southwest province of China, on Nov. 4, but the rebellion in the Province of Szechuan, adjoining it, is not anti-foreign.

WELCOME THE NEW YEAR.

The dreary rainy weather which prevailed dampened the ardor of these persons who had assembled to hear the bell of St. Paul ring out the old and ring in the new year, and to observe Scotland's traditional hogmanay under the shadow of London's cathedral. In anticipation of the event, the authorities had caused to be put up an iron railing around the semi-circular pavement in front of the steps, but the precaution was unnecessary, for the gathering, though numbering perhaps 2,000, was the smallest and most orderly in many years. The majority of those who had assembled were evidently Scotchmen, as was evidenced by the constant whistling of "The Cock o' the North." When the stroke of midnight boomed out there was a volley of cheers and then "Auld Lang Syne" was sung, the crowds slowly dispersing as the song died out.

THE MAD KING DYING.

Dispatches from Munich regarding the mad king, Otto of Bavaria, have reached here, which indicate that he is dying. The court physicians are issuing bulletins from the old castle of Nuremberg, where the ruler is, which would lead the public to think that there is no immediate danger. Berlin friends of the royal family have received private information that the king is in the last stages of delirium. King Otto Wilhelm Luitpold of Bavaria was born on April 27, 1813, as the second son of Maximilian II. and Princess Marie of Russia. Twelve years ago he succeeded his brother, Ludwig II., on the throne of Bavaria. The latter died a madman, and when the reins of state fell into the hands of Otto his senses were also clouded, and during all these years he has believed himself actively in command, not realizing that his uncle, Prince Luitpold, is reigning in his stead.

A RUSSIAN RAILWAY SCHEME.

Russia has just completed another great railroad undertaking, according to a report from Consular Agent Harris at Elbenstock. He says that an important branch of the South Siberian Railroad, leading to the borders of Afghanistan, is now ready for business, and the first trip having been made over it on Nov. 20. This road runs from Usun Ada, on the Caspian Sea, through Merv and to the Samarcand, and through it Russia will be able to develop an enormous trade, as it is the key to Afghanistan, the borders of Persia and the great valley of Heri-Rud.

MISSING BOATS FOUND.

Hong Kong, Jan. 1.—Two missing boats of the wrecked British steamer Glenavon have been found. The only missing persons now are Chief Mate Nixon, Second Steward Wilson and two Chinese. Quartermaster Smith died of exhaustion after swimming to Lin Ting Island. The search for the missing continues.

AN UPHEAVAL IN FRANCE

Is Stated To Be Surely Impending.

Henry Norman's Alarmist View of the Situation.

Indications That the French Republic Is Doomed—Spain, Portugal and Newfoundland the World's Worst Danger-Spots.

Mr. Henry Norman cables an alarmist cable article from London to the New York Times today regarding a pending upheaval in France. The article is, in part, as follows: The new year brings in its hand one tremendous question, far overshadowing, for those who know what is passing under the service, every European interest. This is the question: What will happen in France in the immediate future? On Nov. 5 I cabled you these words: "My own opinion is that a coup d'etat is a more probable outcome of the situation than a foreign war." Since then this view has come to be held by the majority of observers, but even now on the eve of events the details of the danger of France are far from being a matter of common knowledge. The rumor that Prince Victor Napoleon had resigned his claims in favor of his brother, Prince Louis, who, by the way, is about to be created a general in the Russian army, turns out to be inaccurate. It is round the person of the former that has grown to its present vast proportions and imminence. For it is now certain that the intention of the chiefs of the French army is to place a Napoleon again upon the throne of France and very soon. I fully realize the gravity of this statement, but I make it upon information which would convince the most skeptical. I was at liberty to publish it. I say this in my intention, a fixed, determined, passionate intention, but it is easy to understand that in so extremely ticklish a task their wheels. For example, and make a public appeal to the army before the military conspirators can rally to the republic in portions as to render a military obviously futile beforehand. civil authorities may convey a court of cassation that the Dreyfus or the pronouncement of innocence would result in a throw of the republic the net which case it is conceivable, if the highest judges in France feel compelled to choose the two such gigantic evils. But some such counsel of despair you may look for within a period to be measured in days. For what I know is that chiefs of the French army are absolutely resolved that Dreyfus shall not be brought back. The whole of real power in France at this moment is in the hands of General Zurlinden, the military governor of Paris. a strong man, a resolute man, a child in his hands, as may be seen from De Freycinet's nickname among the soldiers, "The Little Mouse." General Renouard, the commander-in-chief, and adjutant general, is a capable officer, controlling his comrades, and has recently certain movements of troops called to facilitate their plans.

Prince Victor's emissaries have recently been in England, and endeavoring to raise funds, the lack of which has hitherto been the principal obstacle to his schemes. Moreover, everything now aware that M. Paul de Re, chief of the so-called League of Patriots, which lately received great notice in numbers, had an interview with Prince Victor in Brussels last week, and that on Dec. 20 all the Bonapartists in Brussels to consult about the and to which M. de Marmon, the professor and Ernest Judet, the political orator of Le Petit Journal, that with an enormous circulation, and the people, have agreed to push when the right moment arrives. On Dec. 10, Gen. Lemoix, president-general of the Bonapartist party, and the most influential friend of Prince Victor, was re-elected, and spoke as follows: "The vigil is over. The hour is about to sound. The hour has come when Napoleon, our old master, and the imperial crown will be crowned once more. The revolution would be a blood one. The magazine rifles and the automatic gun have made civilian resistance impossible forever. The streets of Paris are past. would happen if the revolution occurs would be the declaration Zurlinden, and a proclamation to the country that as a Republic government no longer is able to preserve the army from order and the people from anarchy, the army takes command of the situation and honors the charge of the principal revisionists would be declared, and certain newspapers supplied while the troops occupied the chamber and the telegraph Prince Victor would immediately cross the frontier. The moment of comedy might possibly be the tragic scene; for there is more than one pretender, and the D'Orleans might perhaps race Victor to Paris.
