Too Many Artillerymen.

F. B. McCurdy said that there was need for infantry reinforcements for the Canadians, and that conscription was the only way to get them. To equal the record of Canada in proportion the United States would have to forward six million men. If Canada sent 17 per cent of her population, as Britain had, we would be represented at the front by an army of 1,224,000. When at the front in the spring the Canadians held eleven miles at Vimy. Four divisions were there, with 52 infantry regiments The Canadians required reinforcements at the rate of 7,800 a month. On May 14 there were 14,720 reinforcements for Canadian infantry in England; there were 2,118 insufficiently trained infantry was capable administration, men and money. He Eggs, crate tots. 29 to 30

In Volhynia there are signs that the Russians there are preparing for an offensive, and already attacks have been made against the Teuton positions along the Kovel-Lutsk rallroad in the direction of Kovel. Some fighting activity is also reported around Riga and Smorgon, north of the Pripet marshes.

There was another point raised through a change in the translation of the Nationalist motion for the sixmonths' hoist. Mr. Boivin raised the point, and the speaker appointed a committee of the House to revise the record and regulate it.

Will Be No Delay.

There has been some criticism of the Government for not keeping 21 members present to enforce its authority upon such an important measure. However, it is conceded the matter is a mere incident that will not delay the achievement of the vote which is expected Wednesday or Thursday at the latest. The matter occasioned a great searching of parliamentary records, and the decision of the speaker was finally based upon a decision of the British House of Commons given in 1877.

A Nova Scotlan resumed the conscription debate. J. H. Sinclair of Guysboro had a little fun with the Government for loosing its chief bill from the order paper. He said that if there had been even four members of the Government for loosing its chief bill from the order would not have lapsed.
