MAKING FLOWERS LAST.

No flowers will keep satisfactor unless a few rules relating to their care are followed. Too few persons realize that cut flowers need air as well as water. One often finds bouquets with the stems thrust solidly into the mouth of a narrow vase. Vases with wide mouths are preferable, except when two or three buds or small flowers are to be displayed.

used in large masses to create a cheer-ful color effect, but the daintier blooms make a much prettier picture if only a few flowers are used. The Japanese plan of using odd numbers is worth adopting. The appeal of three or five flowers is greater than that of four or the plan of the state of the flowers is greater than that of four or the state of the state six, although one may find it difficult

FAINTING SPELLS

Those feelings of faintness, those weak, "all gone" sinking sensations, which come over some people from time to time, are warnings that must not go unheeded.

They mean an extremely weakened condition of the heart and a disordered nervous system.

When the system is in this condition there is no time for delay. One fainting spell may be recovered from—will the next? One dizzy spell may pass off, but the next may be more serious.

Those who are wise will start taking to explain why.

A simple way to hold a few flowers out purplish in a wide-mouthed vase is to cut two twigs, just the right size to fit tightly across the opening. The stems of the flowers can be held bekept upright, but close to the sides of the vase, by the use of small forked twigs. It is convenient to use flower scissors when cutting flowers out of doors, but they have a tendency to squeeze the stems so that less water will be taken up. It is best to cut all flower stems with a knife, after they have been brought to the house, if sois-sors are used in the garden, and the cut should be oblique rather than straight across. It is an excellent practice to cut off a little of the stem each morning, so that a fresh surface will be presented.

Golden Text.—He that is faithful also in much.
—Luke 16: 10.
CHARACTER IS BACK OF FAITHEYULNESS.

The boy Joseph who was sold into Egypt has now become ruler of the nation which he entered as a slaze. After some very trying experiences in that country, in the good providence of God, his reliability was seen, and he was prompted by the Pharaoh to be ruler of the land at a time of important crisis in its history and that of the surrounding nations. It must be admitted that Joseph had ability of a very high order, but Joseph's chief strength lay in his character. He was a man of God and did right. He was a good man and chose the path of virtue, when it meant imprisonment, rather than live in sin in a gilded palace. It is always so, that character is essential to faithfulness and efficiency.
