DR. ROBERTSON'S MESSAGE

No man who comes to St. John is heard with keener interest than Dr. James W. Robertson, for the reason that his message is always of serious import, presented with a calmness and force that command instant and sustained attention. On his present visit he asks the citizens to live in a practical, nationwide movement to release more food for export to the war-stricken lands across the sea where humanity's battle is being fought, and where suffering of the most terrible nature is being inflicted upon millions of people.

The response to Dr. Robertson's appeal should be the more prompt and universal because it does not involve any real sacrifice or any suffering at all on the part of the people of St. John. No man, woman or child will be one whit worse off as a result of the carrying out of the food controller's suggestions. The family physician invariably warns us against over-eating, and prescribes simpler diet, and what is good in time of illness is not bad in times of health. To substitute other foods for wheat, bread, beef and butter to the extent asked, will be no real hardship, and as a matter of fact the high price of meats has already produced many forced abstainers among the poorer people.

There is an inspiration in the mere consciousness of marching shoulder to shoulder, and the people of St. John will have that consciousness as they sign their pledges and place the pledge cards in their windows. They may very properly resent the failure of the government to control food prices and eliminate the profiteers, and they may also condemn the government for not doing something practical to increase production in the great and fertile areas which ought to be producing wheat and other crops; but the thing to do in that case is to aid in the defeat of the do-nothing government at the first opportunity. Its failure to do its duty does not absolve them from theirs. Therefore the seed sown by Dr. Robertson should bring forth good fruit in this city and province. Let everybody help.

GOVERNMENT SHOULD ACT.

"If there is such a crop failure in 1918 as was experienced in 1916, from all human judgment can discern, there will be the inevitable starvation of millions of people," Dr. James W. Robertson.

It is perfectly clear that but for the extraordinary efforts put forth by farmers and by the people of the cities, towns and villages, this year's crop yield would have been wholly disproportionate to the needs of the time, and next year's demands will be far greater than those of the present year.

"An agricultural crime" is the designation the Farmer's Magazine applies to the failure of the Dominion government to make a real effort to speed up farm production, especially in the line of wheat, oats, rye and beans. Reviewing the three years of the war, this magazine declares that while advice has been poured out to the farmers, there has been no real work done by the government. "Practically," it says, "there is no action, inactivity, hesitating from one proclamation to another, draws nothing big but its salary." What an apt indictment of the government is found in these words. Let us quote more fully:

"What has been done? How have we shown up at the end of the third year in our total returns of field crops and animal products? Had a kind Providence not showered on us, in 1915, one of the greatest harvests in recent times, even to the extent almost of the miraculous, we have kept up the normal in each succeeding year, where would all our urgent exhortations have been? And what about 1918, the year that will see the world nearest to the starving point since the time of the Ptolemies. Practically there is nothing done. Inactivity, hesitating from one proclamation to another, draws nothing big but its salary. The excuse for inaction cannot be hidden under the creation of new offices to handle the situation. Farmers and everybody are sick to nausea of advice. Producers have done wonderfully well this year. No one who knows what is going on in the big open spaces of the whole country can question the patriotism of the farmers. Talk is cheap, and plans are as numerous as the sands, but it takes man power, horse power, up-to-date machinery, mechanical power, soil fertility, good seasons and markets, that are not here today and gone tomorrow, to greatly increase the nation's food supply. Fore most of all what is wanted is leadership in this agricultural wilderness. Something ought to be done, in a big state-man-line way to markedly increase the production of the chief food crops, such as wheat, oats, rye, and beans. And he done now. It is criminal to expect these extra supplies to come out of a soil that needs the fertility of phosphates and potash in many cases; out of a depleted man-power on the farm, out of a low equipment of mechanical power, with the ever hovering bogey of uncertain prices before the producer, without the active intervention of the state in the controlling of transportation, in the marshalling of power machinery into the fields, or the turning of skilled labor into the work. A state justifies itself only by serving all its people. The getting of food supplies is as amenable to the laws of cause and effect as is the over-supply of shells. We get what we go after—in the right way. We can get the wheat if we want it. Lloyd George is getting it. And that, without the farmers standing to lose out. In Canada we have, as every student of agriculture knows, an enormous capacity for production of a variety of human food of the highest quality. Millions of acres of the finest fertility, out-of-doors are scattered, in big stretches, all over this great country. We very much doubt whether there is a land under heaven that surpasses or even equals its unfulfilling annual output. For any department not to consider the problem of such important as to putting business acumen, and energetic accomplishment at the task is nothing short of criminal. Surely it is not too late yet for the Dominion Department of Agriculture to shake itself free and to get something done."

The Farmer's Magazine contends that there is no excuse for a condition under which there is certain to be less plowing this year than usual in the eastern provinces, while in the west there has not been any concerted action to bring new areas under cultivation, although next year's need for food supplies will be infinitely greater than that of the present year. Then it goes on:

"It is useless to say that more could not be done. Leaders do things. If we had a wide-awake leader of the Agricultural Department at Ottawa the whole plan of crop production could have been drafted long ago and all the tractors would have been ready for the fields in plenty and the main difficulties of the operating of the machines overcome. Greater use could be made of the few tractors we have in the country. Many are lying idle half the time. Others are resting in fence corners for the lack of competent operators. Let the government establish training schools, get the men out riding these iron horses to food victories, and assist in forming in their call for help. Hundreds of farmers want to buy light tractors. They find the price too high. Why not pay the duty for them? Thousands of acres have called for the power plows and the answer is not forthcoming. Why is it? What are our exporters waiting for? Why don't they do it?"

Why, indeed? Simply because the Borden government is utterly incompetent to give the country leadership in anything. It issues proclamations, appoints controllers who do not control, and commissions that are of no practical service. In conclusion the Farmer's Magazine advocates a minimum price for the next wheat crop and says:

"Munition workers are being let out by the thousands in Canada. These could be induced by a good wage paid by the government to go into tractor plowing now. It would not be impossible to put a million acres of fall wheat in Ontario and another million in Saskatchewan, Quebec and Alberta, and the maritimes could increase their acreage of fall rye, a splendid and sure crop could be largely increased in the fall, while the preparation for plowing of all farm lands in Ontario as never before, would ensure as nothing else, a bumper yield in 1918. Moreover, our eastern soils need phosphates. These could be rushed into all the district representative centres and distributed to farmers sowing wheat this fall. The charges could thus be reduced considerably and a better crop assured. With the help of the federal government, alive to this work, it could infuse into the provincial organizations the needed help and inspiration. The harmonious teamwork of these big organized units, would assure a doubling of Canada's wheat production in every province in a short time. To sleep on is criminal."

A PARTISAN MEASURE

The first fact that seems to stand out in the new franchise bill is that while every disloyal Nationalist in Quebec may vote the naturalized alien who is thoroughly loyal is barred.

With regard to women, only the immediate relatives of soldiers overseas are given the franchise, thus discriminating against the great army of childless women and married or single women who have no near relatives of military age, but who have to the full extent of their ability made sacrifices ever since the war began. The women of Ontario and the west, who have the provincial franchise, are not to get the federal.

But we are told that the most serious feature of the bill is the power it gives to partisan appointees of the government to manipulate the voters' lists. The control of the election machinery and the preparation of the lists will be in the hands of the government machine.

That the bill has been framed for partisan purposes rather than as an instrument to record the will of the people appears to be clear. That some of its provisions will be bitterly fought by the opposition is not less clear.

The announcement of the capture of Monte San Gabriele by the Italians was premature. They captured the summit several times, but were each time thrown back. They will not rest, however, until their object is attained.

Premier Lloyd George, in an address yesterday, declared his conviction that the British Empire would soon triumph in the war. Let us hope his optimism is well-founded and that it will be soon.

THE AWAKENER

O land, antithesis to all the world, Whose barbarous deeds have rocked the very earth
And Amity from her high throne have hurled,
Have slain fair Commerce and have strangled Mirth, The dullest prophet can foretell your fate, Though, for your downfall, men impatient wait!

The tale of your dark crime appals mankind, Once aided by your achievements and your might,
Now you have grown a madman, fireous, blind,
Your seeming aim to ravage and kill, Distorting Science to a purpose In each new vile outraging all the moral law.

Yet through the very harshness of deeds,
You labored ingenuously of guile, You prove the spur that this great Nation needs!
We're longed indifferent far too long, You rudely waked us from complacent dreams,
Yet was your act more kindly than it seems!

La! Up and down this wonderful great land Has gone a conscious thrill of strength and might!
Now active grow each brain and heart and hand,
Where once was merely milder, sloth, And each one finds new pressing tasks to do, Stung by the lash that's welded well to you!

In workshop, field and garden, clattering mill,
The plain home kitchen, land and sea and air,
In the laboratory, on the timbered hill, You've started action, effort, everywhere!

O Germany, the land now held in scorn, Through you America awakes, reborn!

LIGHTER VEIN.

Provisional.
Mr. Youngblood reached home late for dinner.

"I got pinched for speeding on the way home," he explained rather sheepishly. "Have to appear tomorrow morning, and get $10 or fifteen days."

Mrs. Youngblood ferretedly clasped two blistered little hands. "What a providence!" she cried devoutly. "You must take the fifteen days, John! The cook has just left!"—Harper's Magazine.

The congressman had received ten applications for press-seen from one constituent, and when the eleventh came he wrote:

"I am sending you the seeds, but what in Heaven's name are you doing with so much pea-seed? Are you planting the whole state with peas?"

"No," came back the answer, "we are not planting them at all. We are using them for soup!"—Harper's Magazine.

A military officer was inspecting a yeomanry troop and was particularly struck with the neat way in which repairs had been made on some of the saddles. "Very good work," he remarked to an adjutant. "Who did it?" "Two of my men," was the reply. "You're fortunate to have such expert saddlers in your troop," said the inspecting officer.
"Saddlers" was the adjutant's smiling reply. They're lawyers!"

The officer "show men who can do work like that could have wasted their time in the law. I can't imagine!"—Farm and Home (British).

To Win Trieste
Vienna The Real Object?
View That General Cadorna is Aiming to Encompass Destruction Of Austrian Army as Military Force.
(New York Times Editorial.)
What is General Cadorna's objective?
He will not permit a word on the subject in any official report, but the growing developments from day to day lead to point unmistakably to something greater than the taking of Trieste. Besides, there would be no need to make a mystery of that. There is great significance in the official news that the Allies are about to hold a military conference in Paris. This cannot mean anything less than that the plans are to bring about a complete revision of the military plans for the fall and winter months. This cannot mean anything less than that the plans are to centre around the Italian campaign; in other words, around Austria.
If the Italian campaign were directed only to the taking of Trieste, it would create no commotion in the allied high command, would certainly not involve the readjustment of the whole fall and winter plan of campaign on all fronts.
The dispatch referred to clearly indicates that the French and British have received a decided jolt; that they have suddenly awakened to a belief that Cad-orna can furnish them with the key of the situation. Hitherto they have not deemed it worth the while of his succeeding completely in his plans, so the dispatch intimates. But if the plan were only for the taking of Trieste, there would have been no such skepticism.
In view of what he had already accomplished in that direction; still less would there have been any idea of rearranging the war moves of the French and British to fit in with it.

It is striking in two directions at once, south and north, toward Trieste and toward Klagenfurt—"toward Vienna," as the latter direction is sometimes called. In the sense that if there were nothing in the way he would proceed from Klagenfurt to Vienna. When he has that plateau in his possession he can descend from it into the Chiapovano Valley, and when he gets there he will be able to strike between the two wings of the Austrian army and separate them.
That will leave his flanks in the air, and he can turn on either or both and roll them up.
But we are told that the description of his northern movement as "toward Vienna" is as the intention is sometimes

success came the news of the conference to be held in Paris, which is to rearrange the campaign and hinge it on Italy. From these hints, we may conclude that Cadorna has Trieste only as means nothing less than the actual conquest of Austria, which has been the object he has kept steadily in view from the beginning. We may conclude, too, that when his troops debouch in the Chiapovano Valley that object will be in sight. And we may conclude that

The Muddle At Ottawa
(Halifax Chronicle.)
It will be generally admitted that the national affairs of Canada are in a chaotic state at the present time. There is no doubt that the Borden government has forfeited the confidence of the country and is desperately clinging to power with the hope that something favorable to it might turn up. Sir Robert Borden, realizing that the government could not

The present indications are that the pending election will be run on straight party lines.
There is no doubt that the Borden government is responsible for the present muddled conditions of affairs at Ottawa.
The government has persisted in a policy which, while it had the approval of the big interests, has alienated the support of the great mass of the people of Canada. Not only in military affairs, but in all matters affecting the welfare of the people there has been gross bungling and mal-administration. The government has openly encouraged the war profiteers and food pirates and the common people of the country, the farmers and working-men have been bled white. The Toronto Globe put the case plainly and accurately a short time ago when it said:
"The failure of Sir Robert Borden to organize the National sentiment of Quebec behind the war is a blunder that could not have been made by Sir Wilfrid Laurier had he been at the head of the war cabinet in this crisis. The lack of vision and statesmanship shown by the prime minister in his dealing with Quebec might be forgiven, but the country cannot overlook the fact that when the opportunity came to him to fill the role of elder statesman and leader of the nation in a great war, he chose instead the crooked path of the partisan, and played politics when the grave necessities of the times called for wide leadership and unity of action.
Canada is the only country that is muddling through this war. Every other belligerent nation is organized to the highest point of efficiency.
More has been accomplished in a month in the United States in the mobilization of that country's war resources than has been attempted during the thirty-four months of war in Canada." Every Canadian worthy of the name is anxious to win the war but all are tired and sick of the bungling and ranpartisanism of the Borden government and will vote for a change of rulers just as soon as the opportunity is afforded.

ONE WOMAN'S DEVOTION
The war numbers its victims far behind the fighting lines among women as well as men. Such a victim is young wife of a man in the Royal Naval Air Service who was employed in a munition factory and lost her right arm in an explosion last year. Subsequently she became a mother, and handicapped as she was, did her best for the child.
It was heavy work, but at this stage the Royal Surgical Aid Society stepped in and provided her gratuitously with an artificial arm and hand, which enabled her to carry on her work. By means of its special war fund this well-known society has helped many such victims.
