Loses Life Trying To Recover Ball
New York, July 3.—While attempting to recover a baseball which had fallen into the Jersey City Reservoir, Joseph Bushinger, 17 years old, slipped from the reservoir wall bordering Pershing Field into the lake, and was drowned. Four companions, unable to help the boy, notified the police, who later recovered the body.

Alexander's Advice to Young Pitchers Through Times-Star

By GROVER C. ALEXANDER.

Famous Pitcher, Chicago Cubs.

The successful pitcher combines the head with the arm.

The pitcher who has every natural ability, but doesn't use his head, can't hope to get very far.

The great batters are constantly trying to outmanoeuvre the pitcher. The only weapon the pitcher has is to play the game, try to outguess them.

The pitcher with a good arm should seek to conserve it. In the spring he should gradually work it into shape. Go slow on spring enthusiasm, save the old arm for the warm weather.

Once the arm is in shape, it is up to the pitcher to try to keep it that way by giving it every attention.

The wise pitcher conserves his strength, always tries to have something in reserve. He doesn't put all his stuff on every ball pitched. Such a system soon wears him out. Rather, he works hardest in the pinch, only.

Never Too Old to Learn.

Say little but listen and see much, is my choice bit of advice to every pitcher, regardless of whether he is only an amateur, a promising minor leaguer or a star in the big show.

Always listen to advice from an older pitcher. One can always learn something about the art of pitching. I find it so each year.

I feel that my greatest asset as a pitcher is control. What success I have had in baseball I attribute more to that one thing than all others combined.

Every pitcher should work for control. No matter how much stuff a pitcher may have it avails him nothing if he can't get the ball over.

The greatest mistake most pitchers make in warming up. With many pitchers it is merely playing catch, the loosening up of the muscles. No effort is made to concentrate on the pitching.

How to Develop Control.

When warming up to start a game I make an effort to put some thought back of every ball I throw.

Figuring the batter is weak on a fast ball inside, let him high, I try to throw several balls at an imaginary spot, conforming with the batter's weakness.

Then I try to keep the next four or five balls low and on the outside, on the theory that the next imaginary batsman doesn't like that style of pitching.

Then I switch to the curve ball or slow one, figuring the batsman is weak on such deliveries.

Throughout the warmup period I try to do something with every ball I throw. I have an object in mind and seek to attain results.

Such kind of pitching develops perfect control. The mere throwing of the ball to the catcher is worthless from the standpoint of acquiring control.

The pitcher should never forget there are eight other players, waiting and anxious to aid him. The moral, don't try to strike them all out.

Don't let errors worry you, destroy your poise. Never criticize a fellow player. Just remember the player who has erred feels even worse than you do about it.

To sum up my career in the big league as a pitcher, I would say that the success that has been kind enough to come my way has been due to a

WILLIE KNOWS DAD, ALL RIGHT.

"May, has he been to the races?"

"Yes. How do you know?"

"Well, my money box won't rattle."

—The Humorist.

Night Watchmen Kick About Losing Sleep

Danvig, July 3.—Night watchmen have complained that because of the progressive methods of thieves they cannot sleep properly at night.

Recently robbers endeavoring to gain entrance to a food store managed to get into the basement and began boring through the wooden floor for the purpose of cutting a panel that would admit their boxes. It happened that the night watchman was asleep on the floor at that particular spot and when his body was pricked by the sharp instrument he set up a cry that aroused all the night watchmen and policemen in the neighborhood.

The building was quickly surrounded and the robbers were captured.
