Lancaster, Pa., Dec. 25—"Battling" evinsky defeated Leo Houck here today in his last round. A clean knock out in the fourth round that followed when Levinisky delivered a left swing to the point of Houck's jaw, gave him the decision. WAR'S END MADE CHRISTMAS DAY A HAPPY ONE

Christmas was observed in St. John yesterday with a spirit of joy and enthusiasm that had been missing during the last four years. The universal feeling of relief that the war was over and that the casualty lists had ceased to bring their sad messages to anxious homes and the knowledge that the boys and girls were home, gave the day a special significance. The morning masses also were well attended.

The Christmas Day observances were carried out with great success in the institutions of the city yesterday. In the Protestant Orphan's Home a tree had been laden with gifts for the children. At noon the children enjoyed a turkey dinner. As usual they were remembered by their friends. J. D. O'Connell, each child receiving a new twenty-five cent gift and five cents. The day was fittingly observed in the Old Ladies' Home, the Municipal Home, Boys' Industrial Home, and the military hospitals. The war also was remembered by the various churches, the Salvation Army and individuals.

Finest of all Tales of the British Submarines

THE FAMOUS E-14

Story of British Pluck in the Dardanelles When Submarine Went After the Cruiser Goeben—A Gallant Fight

London, Dec. 25.—(Canadian Press dispatch from Reuters Limited).—The finest of all tales of the achievements of British submarines in war time is now completed by the official statement of the sinking of the famous submarine E-14 off the Dardanelles early in 1918 with the loss of her crew, Commander Geoffrey White, and all except seven of the crew.

The E-14 left Mudros on the evening of January 27 and proceeded on the Dardanelles to search for the Goeben. After diving under submarine nets she found that the Goeben had gone, so Commander White turned back, keeping a sharp look out for enemy craft.

A torpedo was fired at a ship which it transpired carried the Goeben's ammunition, causing a heavy explosion which extinguished the submarine's lights and sprang the fore-hatch. Leaking badly the submarine rose to within fifteen feet of the surface. Land forts immediately opened a heavy fire but did not hit her. She submerged to 100 feet and continued on her course, but became unsteady and kept diving so she was brought to the surface, as she could no longer be relied upon under water, and only three bottles of air were left. A heavy fire immediately opened from both sides of the straits and a shell hit the hull just over the wardroom, destroying the upper steering gear.

An E-14 survivor says: "Orders were given to steer from below and we ran the gunnery for half an hour, only a few shots hitting us. The captain, seeing it

The submarine soon afterwards ran into a sand bank close in shore and the Turks picked up the survivors.

THEY THAT FOUGHT FOR FREEDOM

Peace smiles at last; the Nation calls her sons
To sheath the sword; her battle-flags she furls,
Speaks in glad thunders from unshotted guns,
No terror shrouded in the smoke-wreaths of curls.

O ye that fought for Freedom, living, dead,
One sacred host of God's anointed
Queen,
For every holy drop your veins have shed
We breathe a welcome to our bowers of green!

Welcome, ye living! from the foe's man's grip
Your country's banner it was yours to wrest—
Ah, many a forehead shows the banner-stripe,
And stars, once crimson, hallow many a breast.

And ye, pale heroes, who from glory's bed
Mark when your old battalions form in line,
Move in their marching ranks with noiseless tread,
And shape unheard the evening countersign.

Come with your comrades, the returning brave;
Shoulder to shoulder they await you here;
These lent the life their martyr-brothers gave—
Living and dead alike forever dear.

CHAPTER 12

Intent on watching the three-fingered ruffian who had "married" Jean to Lawless, Iron Star had quite forgotten "Snaky," who stealthily stole around behind the group of prisoners and unobserved gained the open.

Suddenly Iron Star stepped forward and grasping Sharpless, whirled him around. Sharpless was powerless in Iron Star's grasp.

"Three-fingered Sharpless," exclaimed the Indian, as he looked closely at his left hand. Jean, wondering at the Indian's interest in the identification, pressed forward and Iron Star let her and Sharpless to where Bob and Bill waited the wagon moving from beneath Lawless.

"Little mislay no marry. Him bad man," said the Indian, pointing to Sharpless. "Him 'Three-fingered Sharpless.'"

During the interruption, "Snaky" sprang from the crowd and struck down the trooper at the horses' heads, shot away the rope about Lawless' neck, springing into the driver's seat and waving away and out of sure pistol range, taking Lawless with him, before Bob or his men could make a move.

Jean's first thought after her great relief at realizing she was not married to Lawless was that she, in a way, had stopped the lynching.

"Thank God, I was not too late," she exclaimed. And Bill, with a laugh, replied:

"As an officer of the law, I would have stopped it. I just wanted to frighten him into an admission of the fraud."

Then realizing that Lawless and "Snaky" were getting further away, Bill spurred the others to action. Calling his corporal and his prisoners from the house, he ordered:

"Take them to Atawanna and put them in jail, and taking four of the troopers he bade farewell to Bob and Jean and Iron Star and rode away after Lawless.

Lashing the horses, the wagon swayed dangerously from side to side, "Snaky" continued his flight to the narrow bridge spanning a gorge. Halting, he freed Lawless of his bonds and oversteering the wagon at the entrance of the bridge to delay pursuers, the two men rode into a creek. Through the middle of this they splashed a short distance, then up the opposite bank, then back down the creek and out again, picking up the road to Atawanna.

When Bill and his posse arrived at the bridge above the gorge, they paused only long enough to throw off the wagon, and leaving two of his troopers on guard, the sergeant continued to the creek, up which they rode, only to lose the trail of the outlaws where they doubled back.

Meanwhile Bob, Jean, Iron Star and Hyde had obtained fresh horses and left the ranch, and also headed for Atawanna.

"We'll go to town to see if that copy of the will has arrived," said Bob and Jean readily assented.

There was excitement in Atawanna when the Mounted Police corporal with his prisoners arrived. And in the crowd was a woman who was especially interested, for her husband was one of the gang. She caught his eyes and they exchanged signs, after which she slipped away to the outskirts of the town to a rough shanty.

"The posse's got my man," she told the outlaws, much worried. But Lawless reassured her.

"Don't worry. We'll get him back." Ordering her to get writing materials, Lawless wrote a letter, and even passing when "Snaky" called from the window that Bob and Jean and the others were passing on their way to town. Lawless gave the letter to the woman with careful instructions as to its delivery and then he and "Snaky" rode up.
