The industrious manner in which the new Royal Bank site is being made ready for the builders is re-freshing to pedestrians who have in the past had to take the middle of the road whenever a big work like this one is commenced. The contractors have built a smooth board fence with a plank sidewalk, so that passersby will be enabled to keep out of the mud, and are boxing in the building area. In the past citizens had to take to the mud and dirt when a building is in course of erection. It is hoped local bosses will take the hint.
