IN MANY A CONFLICT WORN SPENT.

In many a centilict worn and spont,
A fearless though forsaken bend
Of twice five thousand soldiers went,
Treading a strange and hostile land:
From red Comars a recking field,
To the dark Enxime's briny flood,
They marched with bonner, spear and shield,
Winning each league by toil and blood.

They climbed at last a ragged peak.

The tallest of a lofty chain,
Still unaubdued, though sad and weak
With half their number lost or slain.
When loud and wild a thrilling cry
Comes rolling from the distant van :—
Do foemen lark in ambush nigh?
Are warriors charging man to man?

"The sea, the sea!"—At those glad we Each swift to gain the foremost rank. The spearmen rush'd, as thirsting herds Go bounding to the river's bank;—They same like dusty vapours roll'd In masses by the raging blast.
And gazed on that broad sea, which told Of glory won and danger past.

Christians! thy way like theirs may lie.
Though many a scene of strife and we,
And every point that meets thine eye,
May hold a stern and watchful foe;
Yet drop thou not, nor even leave
The post which God assignes to thee:
The brave and true alone receive
The sweet rewards of victory.
