The wind rises . . . we must try to live. The immense air opens and closes my book. The wave, pulverized, dares to gush and spatter from the rocks. Fly away, dazzled, blinded pages. Break, waves. Break with joyful waters. . . .

Lubor Dink

Regular readers of this column are certainly familiar with my writings that reveal the impractical and harmful activities of the lib-left minorities that dominate the western media and governments. The pro-Soviet bias evident in our newspapers and magazines has become so blatant that only the work of Peter Worthington, Toronto Sun publisher and myself has kept the true direction of our society in view.

When one ignores the relentless flow of dogma from the puppets of the Kremlin, we can see that the prime source of negative activism is the modern day university. Though many students have grown up since the Maoist-inspired insurrections of the Fifties and Sixties, there still exists students and professors who are loyal to the KGB and its allies.

These "hippies", heavily influenced by the influx of communist refugees from the third world and foreign students who populate the campuses like so many bacteria, still maintain an irrational grip on reality. To their credit, they recognize our society's problems, (crime, lust, drug abuse, etc.), but they fail to acknowledge the fundamental cause of it all; creeping socialism.

A close friend of mine, a retired R.A.F. commando who flew 37 suicide missions over Germany in 1951, remarked over lunch yesterday that his son has seemingly fell prey to the onslaught of propaganda at the University of Alberta in Edmonton.

This seemingly quiet campus, it appears, is actually the headquarters of a massive Marxist group whose aim is to undermine the basic fabric of society. My friend told me that the group of misguiding Marxists infiltrates the students' collective conscious through the student newspaper The Getaway as well as through their own publications.

That the Clark government allows these groups to exist is a striking example of his weak-kneed liberalism and fundamental failure to understand the meaning of democracy. The Soviet-based collectivists are anti-democratic and should be arrested, as they would be if they lived in more progressive nations such as Chile or Argentina.

More important though, is the need for university administrations to get rid of professors who spread the doctrine of the left. The ivory tower atmosphere of the campuses permits the development of unrealistic ideas, and intellectual vacuums are the eventual result.

In my next column, I will reveal the names of twenty Communist Party members currently employed in top positions at the University of Alberta, as well as the identities of sixteen former Weathermen who are now leading spokesmen for the Committee for an Independent Canada.

the Getaway

The GETAWAY is a paper of the people, by the people, and for the people. So where the HELL are you? We're sick and tired of writing this shit and can't wait for all you proletarians (whoever you may be) to come and take us over.

Meanwhile, we're wasting the best years of our lives trapped in this slimy hole churning out a rag that people won't even wrap their fish in because the ink runs. If you can believe it, we've got a turtle for an editor, and the staff looks like a bunch of rejects from "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest." The only people who make less money than us are Mississippi sharecroppers - and they don't have to work nights.

If you still want to work for us, contact one of the caseworkers at Student Help - we're all old buddies.

In the meantime, we're all going to go get pissed!

STAFF THIS ISSUE: On his way to the Revolutionary Workers' League rally, David Marples picked up Mike Walker, who had just returned the Anarchists' Handbook to the library (overdue, of course). They ran into Kent Blinston, who was just finishing a Molotov cocktail, and Jim McElgunn, who had just resigned his membership in the PSUA and joined the SDS. Nina Miller was chic in her new fatigues and she, Brad Keith, and Sue Tech linked arms and sang "Solidarity Forever" all the way to the rally. Jeff Moore spouted off about the inequities of unemployment insurance and John Savard, a recent convert, was in an incendiary mood. Richard Avedon, Alfredo (Che) Steiglitz, and Stevie B. chanted "Death to the Oppressors" as the world-weary, cynical Getaway staff wended their way on. Merry Christmas, everyone!

Breaking Wind

by Street Walker

The U of A has a serious apathy problem. There is less of it every day.

And if certain elements on campus are successful, apathy here could be completely wiped out before students are even aware of the threat.

Some of the greatest damage is being done by Bears' basketball coach Brian Heaney. At the first game of the season (I am told - I wasn't there, of course), Heaney arranged for cheering instructions to be distributed to the spectators. The immediate object, I am told, is to induce cheering from the first jump to the first Bears' basket. Heaney admits that eventually he hopes to hear cheering continuously from start to finish, every game.

The dangerous influence of Engineering Week is at work all the time. This year, Commerce Week included an Engineering-style kickline. Thankfully, Commerce Week was a flop as usual, but with the continued influence of the engineers, it is likely only a matter of time before the Commerce faculty is contaminated, in spite of the valiant resistance of dedicated core of apathetic students in the faculty. Other faculties are in almost as much danger.

What of Bar None, bar nights, pub rallies? Clearly, drinking is a pastime of much merit, and to be praised. However, clubs and student organizations have no place in the bars and lounges of Edmonton. Students must be encouraged to drink for drink's sake. The only likable drunk is an apathetic drunk.

But responsible students must be concerned not only with erasing enthusiasm where it has already gained a foothold: We must also be watchful for developing assaults on our healthy attitudes.

RATT and Fridays should be held under close scrutiny to ensure that they are not hindering the maintenance of a strong degree of apathy in their patrons. Ideally, the atmosphere in the SU's bars should approach that of the Commercial or the Strathcona. Needless to say, this must be a long-term goal, attainable only through the persistence and hard work.

The usual crowd of twenty-five or thirty mothers and sisters at Bears hockey games is also cause for concern. These people must be discouraged from attending before students begin to follow their lead. An admission charge of $10 would likely reduce attendance somewhat. However, this could not be completely effective, since fans pay at least that much to see the Oilers. The ultimate solution is the demolition of the stands.

Fraternities pose perhaps the most persistent and the most impotent anti-apathy force on any campus, and the U of A is no exception. Roy Rambling, particularly avid frat rat, recently revealed in a letter to the Gateway that frats are actively involved with a number of worthy causes, with the obvious goal, as usual, of attracting attention, recognition, and members (each of whom brings with him a large initiation fee). This, of course, is the reason for the perennial impotence of frats: really, they are only concerned with money. They fight apathy only for the cash.

But what can we do? First, take control of Students' Council. Funding for all clubs, including the Garneau Millionaires, must be cut off. Next, the University Athletic Board. Any team attempting to damage apathy must be disbanded.

Third, and most important, students must be vigilant. Any developing attack on apathy must be nipped in the bud. Perhaps an apathy committee could be established with broad powers to take any action necessary to ensure apathy's continued health.

But most important, every student must be vigilant in the personal fight to save apathy. Any threat, no matter how small must be resisted and stamped out.

Only if all of us continue to be aware of the destructive forces among us, will the apathetic atmosphere of the U of A be safeguarded.

FOS answers charges

We would like to respond to accusations made in your paper that Freshman Orientation Seminars are a big waste of money.

You know, all of our volunteers work hard to show those ignorant first-year students the ropes. If it weren't for us, you know, they wouldn't know what RATT is, where to buy tickets for Dinwoodie Socials, and how to spot radicals by the length of their jeans. The point is, you know, to show them what's vital on campus.

And our end-of-the-year banquet is important too, you know. Just who do you think you are, criticizing everything? We're entitled to a little pleasure too, you know. I mean, look at our organization. With about thirty volunteers, we have managed to form eighteen FOS committees, fourteen policy boards, six research crews and seven constitutional subcommittees. Unlike the Gateway, you know, everyone at FOS has a title, and everyone with a title deserves a little reward at the end of the year.

It makes us sick when we see you people constantly running down everything the Students'

Union does and operates. Why don't you leave the university if you think it's so stupid? You know, your negative attitude towards everything just shows what's wrong with our world. You think you're so smart and everything, but you never do anything positive to help people.

Bears' boycott a biggie

You bunch of jerks was really out to lunch with your editorial attacking the Bears' trip to Miami evening. So what if we did chant "Show your tits," we were just having a bit of harmless male fun. What did you expect us to chant - "show your biceps"???

You seem to think we treat them women as hunks of meat, but that ain't true because them foxes are a helluva lot better looking than any old side of beef. How long have you clowns been locked up in SUB, anyway?

Come on guys, let's get real. Most women like being objects of attention, and are thrilled at the chance to strut their stuff. So, cut the feminist crap, or we'll get our friends to stop reading us the Gateway.

She strode purposefully into the room, her black boots gleaming in the fluorescent light.

She unzipped her boots slowly, a sensuous smile forming on her moist red lips.

"I—I—I just want to write!" he stammered, taking his trembling fingers off the keys of the typewriter.

"Don't worry," she said. "Leave your fingers where they are.

I'm really efficient you know."

Beads formed on his forehead. "What are you going to do?"

"Look," she replied. "You want to be a pro, don't you?"

IS YOUR UNCLE GOOD FOR $150,000?

or your father, mother, grandfather, aunt, etc?

Boy, have we got a swindle for you! If you have a lot of really gullible relatives, you could recover all the money you've spent since birth and end up with a tidy nest egg at the end of your university career.

Think about it.

The average student probably knows that investments in lunar diamond mining are considered rather risky, but we realize that anyone who reads our ads must be, shall we say, a mindless cretin.
