Mr. Ivy L. Lee,
26 Broadway,
New York.

Dear Mr. Lee:

Re the attached correspondence, I don't quite see the point either, except that there was something other than madness in the suggestion of the two gentlemen to whom the writer submitted his plans, that they be passed on to Mr. Rockefeller, Jr. instead of being given further consideration by themselves. The letter quite clearly is from an individual who has an idea, and who wants the opportunity to exploit it at the expense of someone else. Just what the idea is I, like you, am at a loss to comprehend. I doubt very much if it is worth while trying further to find out.

Yours sincerely,

W. L. MACKENZIE KING
