Serbs Continue Pursuit of Bulgars, Crossing Cerna

Enemy is Defeated at Cerna Bend and Takes to Flight, While the Conquering Serbians Follow, Gaining Fresh Successes on the March

London, Nov. 13.—The Serbians are continuing their pursuit of the defeated Bulgarians in the Cerna Bend and have captured the village of Iven, according to a Reuter's despatch from Saloniki. Iven is five miles north of Polog, reported captured yesterday, and is about ten miles within the Serbian border.

London, Nov. 13.—(Montreal Gazette)—The Daily News correspondent at British headquarters, giving the particulars of the great aerial battle on the morning of November 9th, says: "The aeroplanes were engaged, says: 'It took place well over the German line in the direction of Vaux Vraucourt, northeast of Enghien, with certain of our aeroplanes were bound on a bombing expedition. With them were fighting machines and scouts, making in all a fleet of thirty. Near the villa of Mory, just before reaching Vaux Vraucourt, they sighted an enemy squadron some-what outnumbering themselves. The actual strength being something from thirty-six to forty aeroplanes. We attacked at once, some of our machines flying at a higher level than the enemy, and a general engagement, which was fought at an average height not much above 5,000 feet. Of the melee which followed, it is impossible to get any coherent account, for no man in it had time or thought for anything except the enemy machines, which he successively engaged, but for twenty minutes such a battle as the world has never seen before. The inextricable tangle of single combats, of darting, swirling machines; the air filled with the roar of seventy propellers and the clatter of guns.

Four of our machines were lost, that is to say they were compelled to descend in German territory, the strong westerly wind drifting the battle as it raged more and more to the enemy's soil. In the ships which came home, one brought a dead observer and two others arrived with wounded pilots, and had difficulty in landing within our lines. Of the enemy we know six machines were sent to earth of which three are known to have crashed. What happened to the other three beyond that they were falling out of control, is not known. In yet another pilot was shot dead. What further casualties the enemy suffered, he alone was aware, but the best evidence that the victory was ours lies in the fact that the whole enemy formation was broken and the scattered Germans fled for safety in all directions, leaving us in possession of the sky. Then we went upon our business. We punctuated our bombs on stores and ammunition depots of Vaux Vraucourt and then came home proudly flying in regular formation, no German daring to interfere.

FRENCH CHILDREN OFF TO MEET HOPELESSLY WOUNDED PAPAS WHEN THEY ARRIVE FROM GERMAN PRISON CAMPS.

One of the most pitiful sights of the war is this all too common sight in beautiful France of the hosts of children meeting the trains bearing their crippled papas as the trains carry them into the border towns from the German prison camps.

It is easy enough to be pleasant when life flows on like a song. But the man worth while is the man who can smile when everything goes dead wrong! Great excitement prevails among contestants these last few days, as the goal of the Courier campaign looms up with only a short time until the prizes will be awarded.
