Strict orders were also given that no man should shoot at any object until he was satisfied that it was not a fellow hunter. It was nearly dark when the party returned to camp where a steaming supper awaited them. The Fisher and Plough boy started out on a fishing expedition and returned with a dozen or more pice grey trout, bass and pickerel, some of which were of extraordinary size and weight The annexed cut will give a fair illustration

THE TOLLING OF THE BELL.

How oft the bell goes tolling.
With its quivering, throbbing or
Pealing out its note of warning,
Tis appointed man should die.
As it tolls and tolls it tolls us,
With its brazen iron tongue,
That for some the race is ended,
The curtain down is rung. In currain down is rung.

It tells of nights of watching,
How the heart grows cold with
Wren from our grasp seems slip;
The forms we love so dear;
It tells of crushed, sad spirits,
Of hopes that are now gone,
While up the street the cortege,
With solemn step moves on. It tells when by the graveside We give back dust to dust, The end of mortal passion, The end of fault and failing, The end of loving kindness, The end of joving kindness, The end of grief and tears, Why should we feel forsaken When e'er we hear ita'knell? May it not tales of gladness As well as sorrow tell? It tolling knock throws oper The doors of our new home, The doors of peace and glory As well as of the tomb By it we are admitted To mansions fair and bright, To wave the palm of victory, All robed in garments white. Tis but the knock that gains An entrance to our rest, A home of joy and beauty For ever with the blost.

Progress in human life and in human Being determined to break all former records, the party took an early dinner and went across the main land to the south of the camp. The dogs got a start a short distance up in the bush and drove a large buck along a ridge where the "Butcher boy" was stationed. The first shot badly wounded him and he made a desperate effort to escape. "Charlie" was too old and experienced a hunter to not make a grand effort to capture his game, and one of the most exciting races in the whole hunt took place before the buck was finally placed hors de combat.
