Student of Social Topics Exonerate Hurl a Terrible Accusation at the Giddy Girls of the Period.

Giddy Girls of the Period.

In the whole galaxy of mortal perplexities there is none more perplexing than that of fixing the responsibility for the dude, says Munsey's Weekly.

The creature exists in every land, with the possibls exception of England, where those who would be dudes if they were permitted to, go into the army. There is no such leisure class in England as there is in this country. To be sure, there are flutes and Marquises and Barons and Lords, but these men are not dudes, because they have duties to perform, which I admit the American dude has not. They represent an idea, which the American dude does not. They are part of a system—the American dude is a part of a disorder, he represents chaos in its completest form, he is a conflued conglomeration of trousers, flesh, cravats, blood, bone and shirt collar; purposeless, incapable of thought, his life one hopeless round of tailors' bills, cocktails and eignered.

round of tailors' bills, cocktails and eigarettes.

Who is responsible for him!
I have heard it said that his father is responsible for him, but it has always seemed to me that this is not a just assertion. Primarily responsible for him, no doubt, is the father of the dude, yet in these days when the struggle for existence is so flerce a fight, when even doubt itself entails an expense so great that it deters the man of moderate means from committing suicide, when the cost of living seems overwhelming, what opportunity is there for the father to direct his son in the proper path toward the goal of mediocrity which must now be regarded as the limit of the dude's capacity! How can the father in these days, when decent poverty is the lot of him who but ten years ago would have been accounted wealthy, spare a moment of his time to see that his boy is cast in the mold of manipood! Is it not too much for the parent to devote time to the education of

The shoulders of the mother must not be overhurdened by so great a responsibility as this. How can an observing person who knows the ways of the mother of the dude reach so absurd a conclusion! Is it not clear to all men of experience that the dude's mother is quite as busy, and as hopelessly busy, too, as the dude's father! When we consider the creaseless round of social duics.

digst out of his master's wardroke and ing that his shoes are removed who goes to bed in the early moreing nurse make he absolved of responsibilities we come to the proper solution of problem. The girl of the period is resulting to the dude. This conclusion not be disputed, for it can not be detailed by the period were to impose something better than small wers to discountenance the eigerette as This is no doubt paradoxical. It is none the less true.

HEAT AND SKULLS.

It Is Now Supposed That the San Wi One of the most intereding tioned by Prof. Virehow to be continued to be conti Eskimau, do not appear to be particular thick. Among the ancient Peruvi in skull recently received by the museum, and the ameent crania collected in Arizana, there are frequent individual variations in thickness, but no tendency to unitual thickness. The conclusion from these facts is that exposure to the sun probably does not cause thickness of the human skull. In connection with this subject, it is interesting to note that among the Australians the simus frontalis is generally found to be solid in the males, instead of being hollow, as in the skulls of other races. This bone in the male Australians generally extends straight across the head, the lower side overhanging the eyes so that they seem to look out from under it, while in the North American Indians a modification of shape deprives them of that heavy look about the forehead. The heavy sams frontals of the Australians, of course, increases the weight of the skull.

and eyes somethes of typin can afford to do this unwomanly thing, perhaps, but can an American woman! Possibly the thing a man last excuses in a woman is us womanliness—that is, where the grade of her ill-footing is above the mere evidence of her ill-footing or vulgarity. A cigarette-smoking woman is not a particularly edify-Ing spectacle.

Two Stories Hinstrating Prairie Morals
Where Lumber Is Concerned. Where Lumber Is Concerned.

Old Philoton Bawyer, the genial Benator from Wisconsin, who can toil a good story as well as any of them, amused his coleagues and the New York Tribune correspondent in the committee room of pensions

Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named so the other day by referring to the emertness of a local preacher near his home, who, he says, is as sharpind shrewd at a bargain as be is prompt to attend to the spiritual requirements of those in afficient. This preacher was called upon once to attend a funeral, and on returning home remarked, with no small satisfaction, that he had "improved the time by making fifteen dollars in a wood trade while the mourners were viewing the corpose."

This little lumber story reminded one of the Nebraska Senators of one of the rosts powerful and effective revivals that ever occurred in the West at a little town in his Blate not a thousand miles from Omaia, where every male inhabitant, with a single exception, was converted. The inhabitants of the town were, as a rule, wretcheally poor. The president of the railroad company on the line of which the town was situated, touched with sympathy for their condition, approached one of the principal and inquired if they ever had any preaching out in that sestion.

"Freaching!" said the person addressed, "Oh, yos; we had a great revival here last winter, and all got converted but one man, who said he could not join the church until he had stolen timber enough from the railroad company to fence his farm."

I suppose that these two stories, as illustrating prairie morals where lumber is concerned, are unique, if I may be permitted to protected as built.

make such an inquiry. As is well known, the human skull increases in hardness from childhood to maturity and age. A miscellaneous collection of skulls of any giver people would therefore be of no value in such an investigation. To obtain a collection of skulls of a number of nationalities, that should be taken from subjects all of the same age, to have them all similarly prepared and in sufficient numbers to make it possible to draw any general conclusions from their comparison with cach other would be manifestly impossible. More attention has been given to the relative their has of different skulls, or rather to their weight, from which their thickness may be inferred.
