

WAS DAVIS INNOCENT?

HE DENIES HIS GUILT WITH HIS LAST UTTERANCE.

His Neck Broken by the Fall—Dubiols Expresses Penitence for His Crime—History of the Case.

BELLEVILLE, June 22.—The execution of Peter Edward Davis for the murder of William Emory of Marmora township, on Sept. 19 last, took place Thursday morning. Rev. S. Dave and Rev. D. F. Rogart were with him during the night. He accepted their ministrations in a satisfactory way, but declared his innocence of the crime, saying he was probably several miles away when it was committed. Rev. Mr. Dave and Deathwatch McGrath both believe that Davis was innocent.

At 7.55 the melancholy procession to the gallows passed down the stairs to the place of execution. Standing on the scaffold, without a tremor the prisoner exclaimed: "I am innocent, so help me God!" Prayer was then engaged in, the culprit repeating the responses in a loud voice. The weight was sprung and Peter Davis dangled in the air. His legs twitched for a few moments, his neck being apparently broken.

Davis' body was buried in the cemetery in the afternoon. He left no written message beyond a few lines requesting that his watch, pants and two home made shirts be given to his sister.

The crime for which Davis forfeited his life was of a particularly atrocious character. Some four years ago he was employed by Emory as a farm laborer, and in a short time succeeded in debauching his employer's wife, who is a rather good looking woman of about 30 years of age, and the mother of three children. This intimacy was observed by the husband, and a bad feeling sprang up between the two men, which resulted in Davis' dismissal, following which Davis vowed vengeance against Emory and continued to meet the woman and visit her at her husband's house when opportunity offered. On Sept. 19 last Emory left home to cut hay in a marsh four miles distant and on the next day he was there found lying dead with a bullet wound in his breast, his gun, the muzzle of which was stuck in the ground, standing upright about six feet from the body. Davis was seen in the vicinity of the day before and the day after. He was tried at the spring assizes and was convicted, the evidence being purely circumstantial. The woman, who was also tried was found by the jury to have had knowledge of the crime previous to its commission, but she was not guilty of having desired it. She was therefore acquitted.

Dubiols Hanged at Quebec. QUEBEC, June 30.—The murderer Dubiols suffered the extreme penalty of the law at 9 o'clock this morning. At 7.55 Dubiols, supported by some of the jail guards, and accompanied by the Methodist minister, Rev. Mr. Bland, made his appearance at the jail door. His face showed symptoms of inebriety, and slowly he climbed the scaffold steps. Arrived on top he gazed about upon the reporters and addressed them thus: "Well, gentlemen, I am very sorry for the deed I have done. I hope I will meet my wife and children in heaven; that's all."

On Rev. Mr. Bland uttering the Amen of the Lord's Prayer, the hangman sprang the drop. After a few spasmodic movements of the body it swung round and round at the end of the rope, the blood oozing from under the mask as it came from the neck. The hangman was a Toronto man, well known in criminal circles. This was his ninth execution. Dubiols was dead seven minutes after the opening of the trap, which occurred at 8 a. m. sharp.

The crime was perpetrated on Sunday morning, Feb. 23, in the small parish of St. Alban, Portneuf county. Dubiols had quarrel with his wife and mother-in-law. Enraged at their conduct, he being a drunkard, he man and depending on the scanty means of his father-in-law for the support of his family and of himself, he seized an axe and attacked his wife, her mother and two of his children, whom he butchered in a way too hideous to describe.

FALSE INVOICES IN COURT.

A Toronto Merchant Charged With Some Scandalous Business in a Five Case. Toronto, June 27.—The Street railway by law carried by a sweeping majority on Saturday. In all there were 5881 votes polled and 5470 of these were in favor of the city being empowered to borrow money to acquire the railway. The by-law thus is sustained by a majority of 509.

A peculiar and distressing accident occurred on Saturday, which resulted in the death of Mr. Edwin T. Coates, a promising young musician. About 5 o'clock the late Mr. Coates, a police constable and riding up Church-street, when he attempted to pass between a street car and a load of hay, which at that moment was passing along Queen-street in an easterly direction. Unfortunately for Mr. Coates, a pole which protruded from the rear end of the wagon, caught him by the right leg and threw him to the ground with terrible force. He alighted on his head, fracturing the base of the skull. Hysterics were applied but to no avail, as he never recovered consciousness. He lingered until 3 o'clock yesterday morning when he died.

The case of the Insurance Companies against F. X. Constan, the proprietor of the Bon Marche, is in progress and is creating great interest. The companies are seeking to recover insurance money paid the defendant on the ground that false invoices of goods alleged to have been burned, purpose is damaged goods articles and committed other kinds of fraud. The deposition of Harry Wilkinson, at one time a clerk at the Bon Marche but now living in the United States, was read to the jury. The witness stated that certain invoices were forged to deceive the insurance people, that he dumped them and searched them at the furnace so as to make them porous (they had been treated the first time) and put them on the fire. Witness retained the originals and was subsequently offered $30 each for them. Subsequently witness said a proposition was made by Constan to give witness $200 to $300 if he would go to Europe but he refused. William Blackley of D. McCall & Co., testified that false invoices to the extent of $307 has been found against his firm. Several other witnesses giving evidence of a like nature were examined. The case is still in progress and will last 2 or 3 days longer.

The 11-month-old daughter of Mrs. Fox 20 Sackville-street, tumbled out the back door and was not missed for half an hour. When her mother went to search for the child she was horrified to discover it in a tub nearly filled with soap suds. The effects of the live incense of the bumps raised the child's neck yesterday.

Mr. Nicholas Avey, M. L. A., President of the Central Farmers' Institute, was requested to withdraw from the meeting while the members of the Executive Board debated a matter in which his name was likely to be introduced. The meeting was held in Toronto on Thursday. The object of debate was the representation of the farming community in the Executive Cabinet, and a memorial was drafted to the Government, asking that two farmers be appointed to fill the vacancies now existing, and the names of Messrs. Avey and Dryden were favorably mentioned.

A FATAL SMASHUP.

TWO GRAND TRUNK SLEEPERS GO OVER AN EMBANKMENT.

One of the Passengers Loses His Life—The Accident Caused by Spreading Balls—The Cars Dashed to the Bottom of a 30-Foot Ravine.

COPEWORTH, Ont., June 23.—A frightful accident occurred a short distance from Copeworth this afternoon. No. 5 Atlantic express from the west, due in Hamilton at 1.55, was the fated train. Just west of the bridge over the mill-pond the rails spread and three of the cars were derailed, the Wagner sleepers New York and Kinderhook were thrown down a steep embankment, and are now lying at the bottom smashed to pieces.

E. J. McDonnell, Hyde Park, Chicago, was killed. He and his wife were in the sleeper Kinderhook. McDonnell was killed outright. His body was crushed in between the seats and was frightfully mangled. Willing hands were soon at work, and in a short time McDonnell's body was taken from the wreck. The injured are: Conductor Larnour, of the Wagner Car Company, 394 West Jackson-street, Chicago, scalp wound and arm crushed.

Mrs. E. J. McDonnell, Hyde Park, Chicago, wife of the passenger who was killed, scalp wound and contusion on the head. The train was in charge of Conductor Stewart. It consisted of five passenger coaches, the dining-car and the Wagner sleepers New Mexico and Kinderhook. All the cars except the dining-room coaches and the two sleepers got across the small bridge safely. The embankment is about 30 feet, and it is fortunate that there were so few passengers in the sleeper, which was dashed to the bottom of the ravine. It is likely that the injured passengers will recover, as their wounds are not serious.

Shortly after the accident occurred a special arrived from Hamilton with Dr. Riddley, Mackenzie, Griffin, Husband and Olansted, J. Joseph Wallace, chief of police, Superintendent Staff's officer, John Hall and Track Inspector Nelson. The injured passengers were carried to the switch house, where their wounds were dressed. There were a number of Hamilton passengers on board. The injured people will be taken to the Hamilton hospital.

Immediately east of Copeworth the railway line runs through a cutting having a quick sand bottom. This opens out on a gulley, where the descent into the Dundas valley begins. It is crossed by a small stream. For some distance the line is cut into the hillside. Then there is a considerable filling of clay, about twenty-five or thirty feet above the bottom of the ravine. Fairly level land is regained before the site of the old Flamboro station is reached.

RAN AWAY FROM A CONVENT.

A Pretty Canadian Heiress Sick in the House of the Good Shepherd, Syracuse.

SYRACUSE, June 23.—A pretty young woman of some twenty summers, who gives her name as Marguerite Bush, is sick with fever at the House of the Good Shepherd in this city, having been sent to that institution by Superintendent of the Poor Grimes, whose attention was called to the case by Dr. Heath of Onondaga Valley. The young woman's home is said to be in Toronto, Canada. According to the story as it has been told to the Superintendent, she ran away from a convent or convent school a month or so ago and went to Rochester, where she obtained employment as a domestic. A woman whose acquaintance she made in that city came here soon afterwards and went to work at Charles Wadsworth's house, a mile south of Onondaga Valley.

About two days ago Miss Bush, having lost her situation in Rochester, came to this city, and ascertaining through one of the employment agencies where her friend was working, went to the Wadsworth place to visit her. She was to return to the city in the evening, but when the time for her departure came she had such an appearance of intense fatigue that the Wadsworths pressed her to stay until morning, and she accepted the kind invitation.

During the night she was taken ill, but not wishing to disturb the family she held out until morning, when her condition was such that one of the hired men was despatched in haste for Dr. Heath. The physician found her in a high fever and suffering excruciating pain. After a few days he communicated with Superintendent Grimes, and the result was the girl's removal to the House of the Good Shepherd. While Miss Bush was at Onondaga Valley she received a letter from J. V. A. Bray of 625 Queen-street, Toronto, to whom she said that she was engaged to be married. In the letter the young man rebuked her for leaving Canada. The girl told the doctor that her father died a short time ago and left property to the amount of $100,000, she being the only heir.

Cheese Markets.

Buffalo reports: Sales of cheese were 550 boxes and comprised the entire offerings, 2300 boxes Cloverfield and 1800 Marshfield at $1.45, 1150 boxes Springfield and 400 Neff at $1.45. Utica reports: The cheese market recorded a decline of 5c. The ruling price went down to 8c and several factories sold under this figure. The best factories, however, had no difficulty in obtaining 8 1/2c, and one or two instances buyers bought at 8 1/2c and 8 1/4c. The offerings were large and but few of the factories remained unsold at the close. Transactions totaled 181 lots, 17,107 boxes, ruling price 8c. Transactions for the same date last year aggregated 19,546 boxes, ruling price 8 1/2c.

Little Falls reports: Monday shows the largest sale of the season thus far, but the business was overdone by some of the buyers last week and the figures are not sustained. The decline in price is fully 1/2c, and even at these figures none too much confidence in the outcome is felt by those best informed. Sales of butter were 33 packages; creamery at 15c.

Sullivan Indicted.

PURVIS, Miss., June 23.—At 4 1/2 the grand jury returned an indictment charging John Lawrence Sullivan with prize fighting. The indictment was placed on the appearance docket and will be called up tomorrow morning and a day set for trial. A petition is in circulation to Judge Terrell which is being numerously signed by leading citizens praying that the court be lenient and impose a fine without imprisonment. The petition will be presented in open court.

HEALTH NOTES.

Home Sanitation.

"No man is entitled to a home unless he can make that home happy and healthful. His has no right to be the means of bringing misery to others or to leave to posterity the legacy of ill-health or constitutional weakness. It is the duty of all to be healthy, and to so observe the laws of hygiene that he may contribute the full measure of his individual well-being to the public good. His indifference to or neglect of health laws and the observance of the sanitation of his home is not only a crime against himself, but an infliction of a wrong on the public and a burden on posterity."

"A mistaken idea obtains that an epidemic can prevail before there is need of any sanitary precautions, when the truth is, such epidemics are always evidence that these precautions have been fatally neglected. Moreover, the greatest mortality does not result from epidemics, but from deaths constantly occurring in the course of life. This is due to the fact that the sanitary conditions of neglected homes and, in the absence of inspection and preventive means, extend throughout communities. Such diseases as diphtheria, scarlet fever, typhoid and cholera in this class are constantly carrying off victims, and, in the aggregate, far surpass the deaths in epidemics. These diseases, if they do not result directly from ill kept homes, find in such homes a lodgment, and their virulence and extent is increased."

Hygiene for the Young.

Children should be taught to stand straight, to hold up the head, with the chin down, to throw the shoulders back, to keep the stomach in, and to stand on both feet, not to bear all the weight of the body on one foot. It is a common mistake for any one to walk with a good-sized book on the head, and children are benefited by practicing every day, gradually increasing the weight. Show them how to breathe. Tell them that, in order to get their lungs well filled, they must walk at forty beats of the heart, the air out, and that they cannot do so by breathing just below the throat, but must make use of the great muscle, the diaphragm, that is just below the lungs. Then show them how important it is that clothing should always be loose, and tell them that the results will be of compressing the organs. A teacher must wear her own clothing properly, however, before she can teach others to do so; and often her example will influence a pupil more than any amount of talking. If all these things are taught them, they will be the healthier girls and boys and better women and men than if they allow them to sit and stand in crooked position. Look among the men and women around you, and you will be surprised to find that not more than one out of every hundred will stand or sit as he should.

Fruitful Sobriety.

Little caution is needed against eating too little. Most of us eat far too much. This makes the cost of living high, and is a great waste of strength of body in getting rid of the superfluous food. Cornaro, the dissipate Italian, a physician who lived in Rome, was a great student of diet lived to the age of one hundred years. He ate only ten ounces of solid food per day! "A Frenchman lived for many years, working hard and preserving good health, on fourteen ounces per day." Cornaro, when an octogenarian, "found him a more active and vigorous than when a youth of twenty." If any reader of this wishes to read the writings of a mind filled with energy, cheerfulness, piety and thankfulness to God, resulting from a life of sobriety and temperance in eating, let him read Cornaro's "How to Live One Hundred Years."

Cornaro says: "I pass my hours in great delight and pleasure; in converse with men of good sense and intellectual culture, in reading or writing; endeavoring to be the healthier girls and boys and better women and men than if they allow them to sit and stand in crooked position. Look among the men and women around you, and you will be surprised to find that not more than one out of every hundred will stand or sit as he should."

History of Jack Horner.

Most people have been made acquainted in the nursery with Little Jack Horner. Who sat in a corner, Eating his Christmas pie, Put in his thumb, And pulled out a plum, And said, 'What a good boy am I!'

This individual was not a myth, but a real personage. Tradition furnishes the following story of the fortunate fellow: When Henry VIII suppressed the monasteries and drove the poor old monks from their nests, the title deeds of the Abbey of Mells—including the sumptuous grange built by Abbot Beldwood—were demanded by the commissionnaire. London and Glasgow determined that he would send them to London, and, as the documents were very valuable and the road infested by thieves, it was difficult to get them to the metropolis safely. To accomplish this end, however, he devised the following plan:

He ordered a pie to be made—as fine as ever smoked on a refractory table; inside he put the documents—the finest filling a pie ever had since pies were first made, and he entrusted his dainty to a lad named Horner to carry to London, and to deliver safely into the hands for whom it was intended. But the journey was long and the day cold, and the boy was hungry, and the pie tempting, and the chance of detection was small. So the boy broke a piece of the pie, and beheld a precious plum in the pie. Greedy was the rage of the commissionnaires, heavy the vengeance they dealt out to the monks. Jack kept his secret, and when peaceable times were restored claimed the estates and received them. Whether Mr. Horner deserves the title of "good boy" bestowed on him by the nursery lantern, is more than doubtful. However, that's the story.

Lawyer Allen's First Victory.

Private John Allen, of Mississippi, who became the wag of the House of Representatives with the death of Sargent Cox, told a good story on himself of how he came to be a profound lawyer. A party of members were telling yarns in the cloakroom of the House, and when Allen's turn came he told this one: "I want to tell you of the greatest legal victory of my life," said Allen, as he lighted a cigar and propped his feet against the wall in true Southern style. "It was down in Luperold during the trying period just after the war. I was at that time a practising lawyer—that is, I practiced whenever I had any cases to practice with. One day old 'Uncle' Pompey, one of the old negroes of the settlement, came into my office and said: 'Mars John, I wants you to c'larnme. 'Twas gwine to be 'rested for stealin' two hams out'n de cross road store.' 'Well, Pompey,' I asked, 'did you steal the hams?' 'Mars John, I just took 'em.' 'Did any one see you?' I asked. 'Yes, boss,' said the old negro disconsolately, 'two ole white buckras.' 'Well, Pompey,' I replied, 'I can't do anything for you under the circumstances.' 'Now, Mars John,' said old Pompey, 'here's ten dollars. I jist want you to try.' 'Well, I consented to try,' said Allen.

"The case was to be heard before an old magister named Johnson. He was totally uneducated, and was moreover a perfect dictator, and no negro ever came before him who was not fined the maximum penalty and sent to his field to expiate the crime in the sweat of his brow."

The magistrate heard the case. Every possible proof was brought to show that Pompey stole the hams. There could be no doubt of it from the testimony. I did not put a single question to any of the witnesses, but when the testimony was all in I arose, and in my most dignified manner addressed the magistrate: "'May it please your honor, it would be useless for me to argue before one who would adorn the superior if not the supreme court bench of this grand old commonwealth. And I may say that those who know Johnson best say that you would grace even the supreme court of the United States, the highest tribunal in the land. It will be useless to dwell upon the testimony. You have heard it, and know the cases as well as I do. However, it may not be out of order for me to call your honor's attention to a short passage in the old English law, which clearly decides this case, and which, for the moment, your honor may have forgotten.' "Then I fished down in my pocket and drew forth, with a great flourish, an old copy of 'Julius Caesar.' I opened it with great dignity at the first page and read the line which is familiar to every school boy, 'Omnia Gallia in partes tres divisa est.' 'That decides the case,' said I, throwing the book upon the table. 'That clearly acquits the defendant.' "With great dignity and solemnity I then took my seat. The old magistrate was completely nonplussed. He looked at me quizzically and scratched his head. Then, turning to Pompey, he raised himself to his full height and said: 'Pompey, I know you stole them hams, but by the ingenuity of your lawyer I've got to let you go. Git out,' said he, as he planted his No. 9 in the seat of Pompey's pants, 'and if you ever come here again, lawyer or no lawyer, you will get six months.'"

What's the Reason?

The causes of summer complaint, diarrhoea, cholera, cholera morbus, etc., are the excessive heat, eating green fruit, over exertion, impure water and sudden chill. Dr. Fowler's Wild Strawberry is an infallible and prompt cure for all bowel complaints from whatever cause. 2

GEMS OF THOUGHT.

Man in solitude is an incomplete being; he needs companionship for happiness. Purchase not friends by gifts; when thou ceasest to give, such will cease to love.

To subdue passion and to regulate desire is the greatest task of man as a moral agent.

There is a time for everything and the secret of success in life lies in doing things at just the right minute.

It is the man who determines the dignity of the occupation; not the occupation that measures the dignity of the man.

It is not calculable what may be accomplished in everything in life by moderate beginnings and judicious perseverance.

The worst people are the most injured by slander, as we usually find it to be the best fruit which the birds have been continually pecking at.

It is idleness that creates impossibilities, and where men care not to do a thing they shelter themselves under a persuasion that it cannot be done.

Never do anything which if you should see in another you should count a just occasion to despise him for, or to think any more meanly of him.

Habit in a child is at first like a spider's web; if neglected, it becomes a thread of time; next a cord or rope; finally a cable, and then who can break it?

Without the friendly exchange of kindly words and deeds, without the sunshine of loving looks and smiles of welcome and encouragement, a house may be a habitation but never truly a home.

Blessed is the man who, to his age, has preserved the freshness, the simplicity, and the purity of youth. If upon earth there is one sight more refreshing than another, it is the beholding of a good, great man.

True resignation, which always brings with it the confidence that unchangeable goodness will make even the disappointments of our hopes and the contradictions of life conducive to some benefit, casts a grave but tranquil light over the prospects of even a toilsome and troubled life.

We are very apt to divide human life into the pleasant and the unpleasant, the sweet and the bitter, joy and sorrow, good and evil, and to suppose that out of the former springs all our happiness and welfare out of the latter, all our misery and failure. In so doing, however, we entirely ignore the fact that contrast is a necessary and valuable element in life and happiness.

Poetic sentiment. To apply the poetic words "a medicine that's able to breathe life into a stone" to B. B. B.'s saviors of exaggeration, but considering its countless cures and wonderful work even exaggeration seems justifiable if it convinces those who hesitate to try B. B. B. and be cured. 2
