HOW ZULU WOMEN SEW

What a Distance From Primeval Maids to the Sewing Circle!

The skill of the Zulu of South Africa in sewing fur is a household word in South Africa, and some of the other tribes compete with them. The needle employed is widely different from that used by the ordinary needlewomen. In the first place, it has no eye; in the second, it is like a skewer, pointed at one end and thick at the other. The thread is not of cotton, but is made of the sinews of various animals, the best being made from the sinews in the neck of a giraffe. It is stiff, inelastic, with a great tendency to "kink" and tangle itself up with anything near it. Before being used it is steeped in hot water until it is quite tendents of the Lackawanna, the Le-high and Wilkesbarre, the Delaware and Hudson, the Lehigh. Valley, Coxe Bros. & Company, and the in-dividual operators will be held here separate into filaments, which causes it to separate into filaments, which can thus be obtained of any strength and thickness. Thus the seamstress has a considerable amount of labor before she commences with the real work in hand.

Finally she squats on the ground (for no native stands to work, or do anything else, who can possibly help it), and, taking her needle, bores two onize the officers of the United Mine butt of the needle, drawn tight and two more holes are made with a like in position to know that a settlement slowly compared with an English of the strike depended upon President needlewoman, but fast enough for a country where time is of no value whatever. The skin upon which the seamstress is working is dampened with water before she commences, and as the damp thread and hide dry out it brings the work very closely together. This is carefully attended to and the work is not allowed to get dry until finished, when the seamstress lays it flat upon the ground, pulling it this way and that, and mixing and arranging the hair for several hours, until, the skin being generally dry, it is impossible to from Gen. COOLING WATER WITHOUT ICE. "When a native in one of the broiling hot villages of interior Nicaragua wants to cool some water, she fills a half-gallon earthenware jar about twothirds full. Parenthetically, I say she, ecause this is a task that requires more energy than any male Nicaraguan was ever known to possess. The jar is made of baked clay, and not being glazed, is partially porous, and soon becomes moist on the outside. Two leather straps are firmly attached to the neck, and, seizing these in her hands, she begins to rotate the jars swiftly in the air. The mouth is wide open, but centrifugal attraction keeps the liquid from flying out. The average native woman is frait and listless in appearance, but the endurance which they exhibit at this sort of callsthenics is marvelous. It is about the same as swinging Indian clubs, and I am afraid to say how long I have seen them keep it up, lest you might set me down as a prize liar. Generally the lord and master lies in one corner of their 'jackal,' or hut, smoking a cigarette and watching the operation lanthat Lord Stratheona was to sail for guidly. When the woman thinks the water is sufficiently cool, she stops with a dexterous twist of the wrist. growls out 'Moocha calora!' native patols for 'blamed hot,' and she begins again, patiently describing pin wheels. I have never made a test with a thermometer, but I assure you they can reduce tepid water to the temperature of a very cool mountain spring. In Mexico the natives confine themselves, as a rule, to dampening the jar on the outside and placing it in a current of air. Near the little mountain village of Santa Rosa, on the Mexican Central, there is a cave through which a strong breeze passes at all hours of the day. I have seen the mouth almost choked with water jars left there to cool .- New Orleans'
