the syndicate that had been the outcome of the prudently liberal aid granted by the government. Besides the effect in developing heretofore dormant resources and providing large employment of labor, the enterprise has secured for the government of dollars—to be followed by other thousands—to older Ontario, to purchase farming and other supplies, in this way giving increasing business to our merchants and manufacturers, and spreading an all-round shower of benefits. This was followed last session by a land grant to the Manitoulin and North Shore Railway, which started at Meaford, in Grey county, and passed through Owen Sound and Warton, through the Bruce Peninsula, northward across Manitoulin Island, into the Algoma district, straight into the unbroken wilderness of the north country, bringing its immense resources, agricultural, timber and mineral, into direct connection with older Ontario, through the two great railway systems, which would bring the newly-developed trade direct to the towns and cities of the longer settled portions of the province. By this line millions of acres of good farming land, rich mineral lands and splendid timber would be put in straight touch with the commercial and manufacturing centers of the province, bringing the trade that would be developed, about 80 miles nearer the factories and wholesale houses of London and the whole western peninsula.

A NEW DEPARTURE.

But was not all, last session the government made a beginning in the government construction and ownership of railways, when $10,000 was voted to make surveys for a railway from North Bay or Mattawa to Lake Temiscaming district, to be built as a government line. This would open up an immense and rich agricultural region, and would give Ontario the trade, which is in danger of being diverted eastward, it will at the same time make homes accessible to our farmers' sons and provide routine business, the morning session consisted of the president's address, by Mr. George Dale, and the reading of the reports of delegates to the Ontario Educational Association, by Miss McCall and Mr. Robson.
