A FALSE ECONOMY
Clergyman Says Many Persons Stick Unnecessarily Close to Work.

Rev. Dr. Ross, pastor of St. Andrew's Church, who is about leaving for his vacation, gave a timely address last evening to a large congregation. The preacher spoke of the benefits of holi-daying, showing the necessity for everyone to take some relaxation in these strenuous times. In the high pressure of modern life it was more necessary to have a period of recreation than in the days of our fathers.
There were several prominent men in the congregation, he said, who never took any holidays. He thought that this was false economy—if it was for economy it was done. Everyone should get out with nature for no matter how short a time.

In the morning Dr. Ross preached a sermon, having reference to members of the congregation who had died during the year—in number. Special music beautifying the occasion was given by the choir, under the direction of Mr. Wheeler.

During Mr. Ross' absence at Cambrian, near Orangeville, St. Andrew's pulpit will be supplied for the first two Sundays by Rev. J. M. Nichol, of Wallaceburg, for the next two by Rev. J.
Johnston, of Preston, and for the last two weeks by Rev. G. L. Johnston, the latter's brother, of North Bay.

LONDON ORANGEMEN
MARCH TO CHURCH

Rev. Jas. Livingstone's Sermon Moves the Brethren to Applaud.

About 150 Orangemen marched to Wellington Street Methodist Church yesterday afternoon, where their annual sermon was preached by the Rev.
Jas. Livingstone. The church was filled with Orangemen and their friends. The address of the reverend gentleman seemed to stir the blood of the loyal Orangemen present, for they punctuated his address several times with hearty applause.

Mr. Livingstone took his text from I. Cor. xvi, 13: "Quit you like men, be strong." Paul, he said, had a high ideal of manliness. He loved the highest type of manhood, and he was not satisfied in making manhood departmental —whereas it required the summing up of all the elements before we could stand up before the world and say "This is a man." God's method of raising manhood was not by bringing men up to God, but by coming into man. Men are not raised by supernatural means, but by natural. Christ became human and worked out the problem in his human form. When man fell, his loss was not manhood, but manhood. He fell out of manhood.
God's method was taking us up to our weakest point, and raising us up to the full stature of manhood in Christ Jesus. The heights were beyond, always inviting us.

Orangemen should and did appeal to this desirable ideal of manhood. He was a man of culture, speaking several languages fluently. He was a man of patriotism, vision, and calm purpose.
The speaker gave a historical resume of King William and his times, dealing with all the leading events, and crises of that day. The preacher praised the greatest of men, and dealt with the different circumstances of the times.

He applied the principle that the great object of all manhood reform was the building up of a great national life. He touched on the Autonomy Bill, and said, he thought it would have been better to have left the west unfettered.

The choir, under the leadership of W.
J. Fetherston, rendered several fine anthems.

A vote of thanks was tendered Rev.
Mr. Livingstone by Worshipful Mr.
E. T. Essery, deputy grand master, seconded by Bro. E. H. Wright, worshipful master. The choir also received a vote of thanks, moved by Worshipful Bro. Coo, and seconded by Bro. Griffiths.

Rev. Alfred Brown's Inaugural Sermon in Askin Street Methodist Church.

A large congregation greeted Rev.
Alfred Brown, the new pastor of As-kin Street Methodist Church, who preached his inaugural sermon there yesterday morning. Mr. Brown's subject was, "Go Not from Church to Church," and he proved himself an earnest, effective preacher. His sermon was listened to with the closest attention.

The morning text was Luke x, 7:
"Go Not from House to House." The words were those of Jesus, who was now about to send forth his disciples.
Hitherto in one company, they must now break up. But as they went forth, the Lord warned them against the restless spirit. They were to be pilgrims, not vagrants. The preacher said these words applied to the membership of the church today, substituting the word house for church.

We were living in a restless age.
Many were literally going from house to house in the matter of residence.
The speaker gave a picture of city homes, in summer resorts and in travel; one-half of their time, it was computed, was spent in hotels. In England the average tenure of a house was three years. In America it was much less. The same was true in the social life. Society demanded of its members that they keep on the move, slipping tea, leaving cards, often to the neglect of domesticity and solid friendship. The same thing was found in the industrial world. Men go from occupancy to occupancy, never staying long enough at any one to make a success.

The desire for change had to a considerable degree affected the church.
They were asking for a change of pastorate, a change of methods. "I do not," said the preacher, "believe in the church as a place, but in the church as a people, and in love for souls.
The virtues of religion clustered around a church home. The idea of home was closely associated with the Church of God. The Christian without a church home was a sort of religious gypsy. He was like the man who eats in restaurants and sleeps in lodging houses. It was all very well to talk about belonging to the church, invisible but no man belonged, in the church in the highest sense to the church invisible without belonging to the church visible. Go not from church to church, but stay in the church, and "If these persons would find a perfect church, would they be fit for it? Would they be at home in it?" he asked. Go not from church to church in the desire for novelty, for entertainment, for special preachers. There were people who seemed to think that the business of the church was to entertain, yet the church should be more attractive than the theatre or the social party. Go not from church to church in neglect of Christian worship. "He that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God." Could you imagine a pillar that moves about?
To say you can be just as useful and good a Christian outside the church was to say you were just as better than the Master's.

FINE NEW CHURCH AT STRATFORD

Cornerstone of Roman Catholic Edifice Laid by the Bishop.

Stratford, July 9. — The cornerstone of the magnificent new structure of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church in the east end of Stratford, was laid this morning. The edifice is one of which the clergy and the parishioners may well be proud. It is situated close to the junction of Wells and Doro streets. The dimensions are 50 feet frontage with a depth of 120 feet.
Pressed red brick was used throughout the structure. Adjoining the church is a two-story brick house to be used as the priests' residence.

The procession started from St.
Joseph's Church, led by the Twenty-fourth Regiment band, the C. M. B.
A. and A. O. H. Societies and St.
Joseph's Young Men's Christian Society, followed by the following digni-taries of the church in carriages: The Right Rev. Bishop McEvay, Rev.
Father Aylward, rector of St. Peter's Cathedral, London; Rev. Father Mc-Geary, parish priest, St. Joseph's, Stratford; Rev. Father Laurendeau, curate, city; Rev. Father Grennan, parish priest, St. Mary's; Rev. Father Daniel, city.

There was a great gathering from the city and county to witness the rite, and as soon as the bishop and clergy had robed, the Litany was intimated by Father Brennan, and his lordship proceeded to lay the stone according to the ancient custom of the Roman Catholic Church.

Rev. Father Aylward preached the sermon, and took his text from St.
Luke, ii, 14: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace and goodwill to men." He said, in part, this glorious catechism of the Litany was to announce the birth of the Redeemer, and was repeated daily on account of the graces which flow from it. The ceremony of laying a cornerstone of a new temple of God was most appropriate, as so much peace and happiness would ensue.
The people of the east end of Stratford deserved great credit for providing a place of worship. The building of a house of God would add glory and honor to God and peace to mankind, and to the glory of the triumphant Jesus over the powers of darkness. Every new church was a

Through the act of a man or youth their taxes, Mrs. Tibbs, wife of Wil-unday half holiday and two games for an admission combined to attract a record-breaking crowd to the American League grounds today. The immense throng surged into the field, and crowded even into the diamond, resulting in a temporary suspension of play.

A special detail of police was summoned to the ground. They succeeded in forcing the crowd behind the ropes.
Fifty balls were used in the two games.
Boston and Philadelphia each won a game, the second being called after the eighth inning because of darkness.
