[Special to The Advertiser.]
Toronto, Dec. 4.—The city of London may sell its city hall and the property adjoining it to the Royal Bank of Canada for $100,000 despite the attempts of Mr. John M. Parsons, a rate-payer of that city, to frustrate the city council.

Mr. Justice Middleton this morning at Osgoode Hall gave judgment in the case which was a ragued before him at London a few weeks ago.

His lordship dismissed the action on all grounds.

The case, which has been at Osgoode Hall before our various motions, arease from the point of the fact that Mr. Parsons claimed the city had not the right to sell all the property inasmuch as ther was a passage through the fight to sell all the property inasmuch as ther was a passage through the fight to sell all the property inasmuch as ther was a passage through the fight to sell all the property inasmuch as their was a passage through the fight to sell all the property inasmuch as their was a passage through the fight to sell all the property inasmuch as their counting the property inasmuch as their counting the property inasmuch as their counting the property inasmuch as their was a passage through the city had not the long to small and claimed that the Merchants Bank had been willing to pay a higgment. Mr. Justice Mid-deton says in part:

to interfere with the acts of municipal councils.

"Municipal councils are now recognized as occupying a far more important function than formerly. They have important legislative powers and are supreme both in legislation and administration, so long as their acts are soft ultra vires.

"If the 'powers above,' to which municipal councils are to be subjected are the civil courts, then the courts have been steadily abdicating their jurissidition and declining to sit a san 'upper chamber' of the municipal council and to interfere with the people through their elected representatives."

Draws a Series For The Advertiser MR. BECK BY ACCLAMATION World's Most Famous Cartoonist

THE MOST FAMOUS CARTOONIST IN THE WORLD COPYRIGHT 1908 BY THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

The London Advertiser wishes to announce to its readers that it has secured the rights in this district for the cartoons of John T. McCutcheon, "the most famous cartoonist in the world."

Though Mr. McCutcheon is an American, his subjects are those that might just as well be chosen were he employed in the office of The Advertiser. They are known the world over because of their general interest. McCutcheon's humanity has become a national influence in the United States, and as will be seen by those who follow the service, there is nothing but that which goes to the hearts of the people in the pictures.

The first of the series will be published tomorrow, and the cartoons will be continued at intervals.

One can hardly pick up a magazine or large newspaper withmost out seeing a McCutcheon cartoon reproduced. His work has commended itself to all classes, and The Advertiser feels that the cartoons will be a splendid feature for its readers. Though Mr. McCutcheon is an American, his subjects are those
