Cablegram Announcing Safety Left Unopened by Sister-One Word, "Safe."

'Safe!" This one word was the mesage flashed across the Atlantic Ocean rom Rotterdam, Holland, to A. Mc-Pherson, of 32 Grosvenor street, on Tuesday, from his sister-in-law, Miss Ethel Weldon, of 469 Waterloo stret, who for the past ten days, in company with Mrs. Richards, of Baltimore, had been escorted through Germany by an rmed guard. A peculiar fact in connection with the telegram which arrived in London was that it laid in Mr. McPherson's house all day without being opened, as he was away at the time it came, and as telegrams often come for her husband, Mrs. McPherson did not think of opening it. Thus the welcome and anxiously-awaited news lay unannounced on the table for the greater part of the day: American Consul Intervened.

On Aug 14, the American consul at Munich cabled Mrs. Richards' sister in Baltimore that the ladies had crossed the border from Switzerland into Germany and were safe. They were to be mmediately escorted to the border of tolland. The suspense since this news was received has been great for the friends and relatives of both ladies, as the reports from the war zone have not been encouraging, so far as the treatment of women has been concerned.
