"Our hearts are stirred with sympathy for those who have fallen, and the same time we are stirred to a withering indignation at the unscrupulous tactics of the foe that has devastated Belgium, torpedoed relief boats and perpetrated other shameful outrages," he said. "Thousands of nomes in Belgium and elsewhere have een darkened because of this war, but not until this week has the sorrow been brought home to Canada. The whole war is an outrage against civilization but we are stirred to greater indignation by the atrocities that our own sons have suffered. Our souls revolt at the thought of what has been done, and we must stand today firmly behind the man with the gun.
