A thrill of horror ran through the vast rowd standing on the G. T. R. track and on Front street. A rush was made by a portion of the crowd for the gates leading to the foundry from the Esplande. A. World reporter was standing just outside the gates when the roof fell, and darting nside was soon beside the building. In a minute afterwards Joe Davis came OUT OF A SIDE WINDOW FEET FIRST companions. A cheer went up for the crowd, and hats and caps were waived in the air. Davis was the only one that appeared to be hurt, and he complained of a severe pain in the back. It is thought that he may perhaps be injured internally, but he was walked around quite freely after LOSSES AND INSURANCES.

Oliver & Co. lose on building, plant and stock about $35,000, and Mr. John Oliver informed our reporter that his firm was only insured for one-third that amount. He was not sure about the companies.

A. J. Stephens is manager of the consolidated pupifier company. He could not give an estimate of the loss of his firm. Morrison Bros', machinery can be repaired although it is damaged by the roof falling on it, and will suffer from water-rust. The firm is insured for $14,000 in the Phoenix. IN THE SENATE. In the senate the tariff commission bill was taken up. Harris (Democrat, Tennessee) advocated action on the tariff by committees of congress without further delay. He said he would vote with those who would go the farthest in reducing the duties on imports. He was sure a tax on imports was a most expensive mode of raising revenue. He The engine house was immediately resolutions which again stated the facts of wanted to see the commerce of the world behind the mill. Morrison & Bros'. engine works adjoins Oliver's mill, and is next the vacant lot to the south of the St. James hotel.

When first noticed the fire was very small, but in a few minutes the flames shot up through the roof and it became evident that all attempts to save the burning building swould prove futile. The wind was blowing pretry strong to the northeast and fears were from the first entertained for the safety of Hay & Co.'s factory, just east, and even yor the Queen's hotel. Burning cinders were carried three or four hundred feet into the air and then north-eastwardly forming a complete storm of fire and dropping on the roofs in the business part of the city, some being carried as far as the corner of Queen and Yonge streets.

A few mintes after the fire occurred, men were stationed on the roofs of Hay's furniture factory and adjacent buildings to put out the cinders that fell thickly on them.

The fire originated in the upper part of the speaking on them.

THE PRESEYTERIAN QUESTION.

The bill to incorporate the Presbyterian churches that disapproved of union, under the old name of the Presbyterian Church of Canada in connection with the Church of Scotland, was thrown out in the private bills committee on a vote of 20 to 8. It was opposed very strongly by several members as liable to lead to confusion, though they were not opposed to granting incorporation under another name. The Old Church party made no proposition looking to a change of name, and consequently the preamble was voted down. The bill incorporating the Widows and Orphans' Fund (union bill), was taken up and passed, with slight amendments.

RAILWAY COMMITTEE.

In the railway committee the following bills were passed, with amendments:—To incorporate the Canada Mutual Telegraph company; the Ottawa, Waddington and New York railway; Lake Arthbaska and Hudson's Bay railway. The amalgamating clause in each case was struck out.

THE END OF THE SESSION will probably come on about the 1st of May. The real fight has to come off yet.

CAPITAL NOTES.

The Dakota bill is believed to have been shelved for the session by the action of the senate yesterday.

The senate yesterday. there's far richer music which can be heard, the music which comes from the thrill of longed agitation to the great injury of every interest involved.

Kasson asked why the ways and means committee dld not revise the tariff during the last three congresses.

Carliale said there never had been a time since the house came under the con-

Carlisle said there never had been a time since the house came under the control of the democratic party when there had not been a very large majority on his side in faver of revising the tariff, but the efforts in that direction had been defeated in every instance by an almost unantmous republican side in conjunction with a small minority of democrats. After proclaiming that it carried the presidential election in 1880 and succeeded to power by reason of superior capacity to deal with the tariff question, was the republican party ready to confess itself incapable of perfecting such ordinary legislation as the revision of the tariff? That was what the hill meant, and him it was the purpose of those who advocated a modification of the tariff to disregard him by reducing his wages or depriving him of any privilege now enjoyed, priving him of any privilege now enjoyed, were either attempting to deceive him or were themselves deceived. There was no disposition to strike, a radical, much less a fatal blow at any great industries of the country, nor was it necessary that such a blow should be struck in order to afford people reasonable relief. If the time ever came when the government was to enter upon a course of legislation calculated to relieve the unprotected industries of the country of burdens imposed upon them that time had now come and ought be taken advantage of. Adjourned.

After Mr. Huntington and Sir Richard Cartwright, the members were called and it was lost on a division of 55 yeas to 128 nays, Coupal, Tellier, and McDonald of Victoria, who are government supporters, voting with the opposition.

The house then went into committee on supply on the first resolution to vote $169, $34 for charges of management. A tedious discussion arose between Cartwright, Tilley, Tupper, Anglin and Plumb, on the means of raising loans. Finally that resolution passed and a number of other resolutions of supply were agreed to after informal discussion. The house is still in session.

Kasson, do you admit the principle of protection as a guide in the adjustment of the tariff to any extent.

Carlisle, No, if we were called on now for the first time to declare a principle in inaugurating a policy on this subject I should not hesitate to announce my adherence to the dectrine which demands the highest liberty of trade, that doctrine which invites the consumer and producer to meet on equal terms on a free market for to exchange their commodities, for I believe all commercial restrictions injurious to the country. Miss Shaw then burst into tears and could not say anything further. Mr. Mc-

THE MURDERER'S CONFESSION.

On the way he asked several times if Maggie was dead, but was told that she was not. He then confessed to have struck her. He said that it was all through love for her that he had done it. He went into the stable and asked her if she would come up with the corn, meaning it she would marry him, and she refused. He then struck her. He complained of having dried gore from his self-inflicted wounds

The police, however, kept the crowd back, and the prisoner was lodged in the
