An Old Soldier's EXPERIENCE. "Calvert, Texas, May 8, 1885."

"I wish to express my appreciation of the valuable qualities of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral as a cough remedy."

"While with Churchill's army, just before the battle of Vicksburg, I contracted a severe cough, which terminated in a dangerous pneumonia. I found no relief till our march was made to a country store, where, on asking for some remedy, I was urged to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral."

"I did so, and was rapidly cured. Since then I have kept the Pectoral constantly by me, for family use, and I have found it to be an invaluable remedy for throat and lung diseases."

Thousands of testimonials testify to the prompt cure of all bronchial and lung affections, by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily.

THE STUPID COUPLE. AN EPISODE OF THE ATLANTIC.

"The stupid couple,"—at least that was what the other passengers called them during the first few days of the voyage, after the ship had sailed from Queenstown. Not that they were so very stupid, but that they were so very ignorant of the world.

John Pierpont and his wife had come on board the Shasta at Queenstown by the last train a few minutes before the propeller commenced to revolve slowly, and they had not yet found their stateroom, when the signal, "Fall speed ahead," passed from the bridge to the engine-room; and the throbbing of the great engines told all old travelers that their voyage was commenced in earnest, and that till the ship entered New York harbor, the engine-room must not rest for a moment from their work of driving the great ship on.

The saloon of the Shasta was quite full of cabin passengers, and the passengers were all second-class passengers as well. She was the largest and newest ship of the company's command, and her captain, a general favorite, and known among old travelers to and from America as the luckiest skipper that had ever sailed the Atlantic.

Perhaps it was because there were so many of the seasoned travelers, who in the lobby of the steamer, heard that John Pierpont and his wife seemed to be particularly inexperienced in travel, and therefore deserving of being called stupid; they must certainly never have taken a long voyage before; they showed no concern, they were perfectly satisfied with their own society. Many of the American families and other passengers had known each other at home or had met before, either in other ships or traveling about in Europe, and were like a large party of old friends.

Their journey in autumn to America was what the Pierponts called their wedding trip; but it was a long and weary one, for they had married nearly six years, and had left three little children at home in careful hands. Before they had really sailed to America for their wedding trip; but just then, Mr. Pierpont had inherited a property, and each had to prevent their plan from being carried out.

The weather was splendid on the Atlantic. The sea was calm, and the wind was light, and the sun shone brightly. The Pierponts were very comfortable, and they were very much pleased with their voyage.

They were playing at poker. When Smith showed his hand, his opponent, whose name was not known to him, asked in the pot, saying as he laid down his cards, "Yes, a good hand, but not quite equal to mine." "No," was Smith's somewhat ambiguous reply, "not by a good deal."

"Free and easy" was the name of the game, and a medicine that promotes the free and easy action of the bowels, and all affections of the throat and chest, coughs, colds, inflammation of the lungs, and all affections of the throat and chest.

This is precisely what Block's Anti-Consumptive Syrup is a specific for, and where-fore it is so highly recommended. Children like it because it is pleasant, and it is a most reliable remedy for all the ailments of the throat and chest.

"Why, Johnny," exclaimed mamma, "aren't you ashamed of yourself, going about with such a dirty face?" "No," replied Johnny, with a conscious pride in the integrity of his intentions; "you'd like to have me taken for a dunderhead, wouldn't you?"

"If your hair is gradually thinning and falling out, use Ayer's Hair Vigor. It restores color and vitality. Mrs. F.—'I am so out of spirits the very next day after having used your hair medicine, that I feel as if I were in a brand-new bonnet!'"

That accounts for it. I was afraid that you had been cured. Address M. V. Wood, 189 YONGE STREET, TORONTO, CANADA.
