A LULLABY.

SLEEP, my child' The shadows fall; Silent darkness reigns o'er all; Bird and bloom are lost to sight In the folded arms of night; Stars will soon from cloud-towers peep, While all Nature lies asleep.

Breathe thou softly! Rest is sweet For tired hearts and aching feet; No dull care nor toil is thine— Nor sin, thou blessed child of mine; Tranquil on thy soft couch rest, With dreams of heaven in thy breast.

Buds are sleeping' Close thine eyes, Waken with a soft surprise; Greet the morning with thy smile, And sweet prattle without guile, Scents lie sleeping in the flowers; Slumber till the daylight hours.

Sleep: Thy lather guards thy rest; Lay thy hand upon His breast; Safer than these arms which hold thee, His dearer love will firm enfold thee, Higher love than mine shall He Give, beloved one to thee!

Sleep! The waves have been sleeping, Angels o'er thee watch are keeping, O'er us both the pale stars shine With a radiance half divine. Slumber, innocent and light, Fall from Heaven on thee to-night.

CHANGE THE SUBJECT.

"Always," said papa, as he drank his coffee and enjoyed his morning beefsteak, "always, children, change the subject when anything unpleasant has been said. It is both wise and polite." That evening on his return from business, he found his carnation bed dispoiled, and the tiny imprint of slippered feet silently bearing witness to the small thief. "Mabel," he said to her, "did you pick my flowers?" "Papa," said Mabel," "did you see a monkey in town?"

- "Never mind that. Did you pick my flowers?"
 - " Papa, what did gran'ma send me?"
- "Mabel, what do you mean? Did you pick my flowers? Answer me, yes or no."
- "Yes, papa, I did, but I fout I'd change the subject."

A convict says he was sent to prison for being dishonest, and yet he is compelled every day to cut out pieces of pasteboard, which are put between the soles of the cheap shoes made there and palmed off on the innocent public as leather.
