Ireland still continues to be the scene of appalling destitution; and the accounts from it, of the ravages effected by fever and famine, which daily reach this country, are almost too horrible to be believed. In one case, the feartul incident recorded in the sacred history ( 2 Kings vi. 29) of the famine in Samaria, is said to have actually occurred in the west of that unhappy island; and in a village near to Cork, there were recently found in a hovel, the dead bodies of a father and a son; the latter having in his mouth the father's hand, three fingers of which had been eaten off by his famishing offspring before he expired.

The 24th day of March was universally observed in the thiee kingdoms as a National Fast.

A Fact from the Lace Tradf. - The exquisite ly fine thread which is made in Herault and Brabant, for the parphe of being worked into lace, has eccasinnally attainod a valice almust ir. ceedible.
