"There is some plan under cover," he said, "and it may be that the city will take the matter up in sections."

He was sick of the treatment which had been handed out to him by the city council in the matter and said that in his opinion it would drag along until the ratepayers are absolutely tired of it. "The parks department was considering the purchase of a nice park site, the salen Grove property of twenty acres, running to a ravne," continued Mr. O'Leary. "The city have decided to leave this on account of the money stringency." He said it was up to the two associations to get after the new council.

President Hodgson, who occupied the chair, wanted a ratepayers' board of control formed, where delegates from each of the city's associations could meet and discuss matters relative to their own sections. "In this way questions of interest to one part of the city would be more readily understood by ratepayers in another locality," he said.

"The Toronto Improvement Conference," suggested W. G. Ellis. Mr. Hodgson said he had been in office three months, but as yet knew nothing about it.
