

sulted Fiona Dear as to my luck, and she advised me to try it."

"Don't mention that woman's name to me," Eleanor cried. "I never want to hear of her again. I date all my misfortunes from the night she came here—but we won't go into that now. Here comes Mr. Hardy with the brandy."