To-morrow (Tuesday) the majority of States in the American Union elect a number of their representatives in Congress, and upon the outcome of the contest will to a great extent depend the trend of the Wall-street stock market, for the immediate future, at any rate. The "street" standing to-day on the eve of the battle seems confident in the continued deciled ascendancy of the Republicans. Owing to this sentiment, securities ignored the European political situation, the market ruling strong, especially around the close.
