Star in "Durand of the Bad Land," playing at the Patricia Theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Four Were A 2, One B, in Monday's List.

Only six men were examined by medical boards here on Monday by order of the exemption tribunals. Five were found fit for service in the front line trenches, four reaching Category "A2" standards and one Category "B" stanstandards and one Category "B" standards. Only one was rejected.

Three recruits were examined. One was a Londoner, George Newbury, who was born in England. He was sent to the A. S. C. Details. The other two recruits were signed by the British and Canadian Mission in the United States at Flint, Michigan. They were E. Simpson, who was born in England, and M. Barsamian, who was born in Turkey in Asia. Both will train with the 1st Depot Battalion, Western Ontario Regiment.

her in a private thining loss of ther man interferes, and is shot. By perjured testimony they escape, and Angelina is sent to a Samaritan home for three years. Returning to Anne's Bridge, she is shunned as a jail-bird by the older people, and feared by the children whom she loves. She advertises for summer boarders, but only gets one, a young New Yorker attracted by the trout streams on the Allende estate. He falls in love with Angelina and asks her to marry him, but she refuses him, although she loves him, on account of her prison record, which she keeps a secret. He learns that she has such a record, and disbelieving the village gossips, returns to New York and learns the truth. Then he returns to Anne's Bridge and finds he has removed the only barrier to their happiness.

This picture will be shown again today. Don't miss it.

Not only are these submarine pictures thrilling in the extreme, but they are the first filmed record of how a submarine operates when attacking a big steamer.

It was through the instigation of J. Parker Read Jun., Thomas H. Ince's personal representative, that the United States Government agreed to co-operate in the making of this portion of "Civilization" for this purpose, and, on behalf of Mr. Ince, to pay for the expensive torpedoes and shells used in the fray. The Government agreed to furnish two battleships, two torpedobat destroyers, one cruiser and two submarines, the latter being of the H-boat class.

The battle fought for the movies actually masted twenty-seven minutes. There were 600 shots fired by the United States sailors and soldiers, to say nothing of another 600 shots fired in the air, for the most part, by the hired motion picture soldiers. Of the 600 shots fired by the United States sailors and soldiers. Of the following the same proud of.

Most battles, whether on land or sea, in motion pictures are cleverly faked, but Ince has given the real thing in these thrilling water scenes in "Civilization." In all the boats used in these hair-raising and breath-holding encounters, the only trumped-up vessel is the huge battleship which is sunk by the submarines. This boat was originally the Alden Bessie, a discarded freight steamer, which Mr. Ince had reconstructed at a cost of several hundred dollars and fitted up as a battleship for the sole pupose of being sunk a few nours after she was afloat.

It will be seen that, gauged by mere expenditure of money, Mr. Ince must have done this. For his million, he gives you the last word in battle scenes In battle scenes he is facile princeps. About three years ago he made the Battle of Gettysburg, which is still regarded as a classic of war film work. In "Civilization" he takes you on water, and by the help of the United Stated Government, always friendly toward the movies, he shows you duels,
