AT LARGE; WOMAN PLEADS NOT GUILTY

The young woman, deserted by her alleged "gentieman" friend, who made for the "tell timbers" Sunday night when the car belonging to Dr. Angus Graham that they had stolen, broke down on the Asylum side road, refused to do anything but weep in police court when arraigned yesterday afternoon. In between "weeps" she pleaded not guilty to the charge of having stolen the car, a Ford couplet. Crown Attorney J. P. McKillop asked that the woman, who is married and has a child, be remanded for a week, as it was anticipated that the driver of the "Henry" would be arrested in the very near future. The girl's mother asked that she bailed, but this Mr. McKillop refused to sanction. "Think of her poor child," said the mother.

"Why didn't she think of the child Sunday night and the three nights previous to that?" asked the crown attorney.

"Your daughter will be brought up again when we get the man that drove the car." Accordingly she was remanded to jail by Deputy Police Magistrate P. H. Bartlett.

There story, the cast and the production as a whole were eminently satisfactory to the audience and applauses of the stream and spontaneous. Lieut Denton of a detachment of the State Stavalry, stationed in Arizona, leves Bonita, daughter of Mr. v.
