THE DAY'S EVENTS REVIEWED

and to push forward as far as possible towards the second line of de fence beyond.

In order to be able to carry thru such an operation there must be big element of surprise. As aerial observation prevents the concealment of big concentrations of troops, the general knowledge of a coming offensive cannot be kept from the enemy, so this form of surprise can be counted on as eliminated. The surprise may come in the form of the making of & general series of attacks ending with the concentration of efforts on a front of eight to twenty-five miles in breadth for the purpose of trying to break that front. The Germans have preferred making the front chosen for their principal assaults as narrow as is conveniently possible, while the allies have shown a persistent tendency to widen the area of their

If you closely conserve conditions on the British front at the present time you will note that the Germans, suspicious of British designs, have kept pretty constantly on that front a force of about 500,000 bayonets and amounting with artillery and other services to about 900,000 men, or at least 9000 men a mile. That is three times the concentration of troops per mile deemed capable of holding a fortified front. The conclusion is therefore irresistible that if the British are planning to break that/front in the near future they must bring into play not only vastly superior numbers, but the greatest artillery surprise of the war. must be able to fire, perhaps, ten shells to the Germans' one. It is not improbable that if the attack is launched in all seriousness of endeavor it will be supported by the massed fire of a number of batteries at present undreamed of. New tactical surprises may also be produced.

Before Verdun yesterday the Germans continued the suspension of offensive operations, for the attack which the French repulsed in Fleury Village was plainly a local action, without any connection with the general plans of the enemy. The artillery action has appreciably diminished. It is evident that the Germans have other matters to absorb their attention Continuing their counter-offensive against the Austrians in the Trentino the Italians yesterday advanced on a twenty-mile front or more and occupied many strong positions wrested from the Austrians. progress has been general, altho fiercely resisted at many points-Italians have cleared the enemy out of the Posina Valley as far as the porthern slope and have occupied Arsiero. They report the finding of considerable evidence of the barbarous methods of the Austrians. These qualifications mentioned should come have burned Arsiero, Asiago and many smaller villages. It will be noted that it was fully three weeks before the influence of the great Russian offensive was shown on the Italian front. It took that long for the rather slow transportation methods of the enemy to remove his reserves from the Trentino to the Russian front. In all their railway transportation in this war the central powers have not developed an efficiency of rapid handling of men and supplies comparable to the efficiency constantly maintained on Canadian railways.

Hope is Felt That Compromise Will Yet Be Agreed

the hope that a crisis will be avoided. Earl of Selborne Explains.

The Earl of Selborne said in the house of lords that he had resigned as president of the board of agriculture because of dissatisfaction over the proposed settlement of the Irish question.

The earl said his understanding of the basis of the inquiry made by David Lloyd George was that it contemplated an amendment of the Home Rule Ac whereby Ulster or a part thereof should be excluded from the operation of the act, and that the bill of exclusion should be passed during the war, but that neither the principal nor the amending act would come into opera-tion until the restoration of peace. In this belief he concurred in the appoint-ment of Mr. Lloyd George to take up Dangerous at Present.

When, at Whitsuntide, he learned the basis of the inquiry had beer changed, the earl continued, and that it had become part of the proposed settlement that Home Rule, with the into operation during the war, he informed Premier Asquith he could take no responsibility for such a policy, and handed in his resignation. He said he was ready to arrange for the exclusion of Ulster now and to give every guarantee that Home Rule would come change during the war, owing to the disturbed conditions in Ireland.

"I say this," he added, "while acknowledging in the fullest way the loyal and patriotic action of John Redmond during the war."
