Duncan Commission Told N. S. Needs Greater Control of Trade

LOGAN APPEALS FOR MARITIME UNION

Thinks That New Deal Within Confederation Is Necessary

HALIFAX, July 29—"Rejoicing in the fact that we are Britons, united, unswervingly in loyalty to the Crown and Empire, seeking to establish a comunity of interest and the right to live, each in our own way along natural lines, and seeking also to promote the happiness and contentment of all Canadians, it should not, in my opinion, be too much to hope that eventually the accredited representatives of this province and the representatives of the rest of Canada may, in roundtable conferences, seriously consider the question of granting such constitutional terms or economic arrangements to Nova Scotia that will enable the people of this province to live and prosper as well as promote the economic advantage and welfare of the rest of Canada."

So declared Hon. F. B. McCurdy, former minsiter of public works in the Dominion government, in the course of a statement read today before the Royal Commission, headed by Sir Andrew Rae Duncan, investigating the situation of the Maritime Provinces within the Canadian Confederation. The remedies suggested by Mr. McCurdy for the economic ills of Nova Scotia included a "lower revenue tariff with greater control over her trade and fisheries."

While admitting that certain conditions made it difficult of operation at times, he was of the opinion that lobster fishing seasons should be statutory.

Dr. M. Cummings, secretary of the Department of Agriculture and Principal of the Nova Scotia argicultura (College at Truro, urged that the Dominion government should restore the agriculture grant which was discontinued in 1923. Nova Scotia had made great use of the grant and had something to show for it, and he felt the province had a good ground for seeking its restoration.
