THE PRACTICAL PHILOSOPHER.
(American Machinist.)

How many realize that a certain amount of the firm's money has been spent in training a man for the particular work that he has been doing in the shop, and that when he goes that investment is wiped out?

Through the observing eye, there are great possibilities of development because growth is the result of observation put in practice. Years of experience count as nothing if those years are not made up of days of observing.

In considering the corrosive effect of the climate of Panama on metals, it might be remembered that hundreds of steel cars, left unprotected for nearly twenty years, though not free from rust, were still usable when the U. S. government took over the canal.

Worm-gear cases, and, for that matter, all gear cases, should be provided with vents; if this is not done, the expansion of the air by the heat will drive the air out through the bearings. The action repeats itself every time the gearing is started from the cold state and ultimately empties the case of most of its oil.

There is nothing mysterious in mechanics, every machine, no matter how much the operation of its intricate parts may border on the mysterious, is really made up of nothing but a few elemental motions known to each one of us. To begin at the first motion and follow each train through intelligently to its completion will convince us of the simplicity of it all.

A site has been purchased and it is proposed to embody in the works in every way the latest practice of the day. The plant is to be in operation by July, 1918. Smith, Hinchman & Grylls of Detroit, have been appointed engineers to prepare plans and specifications for buildings and equipment.

Stomach Troubles Due to Acidity

SO SAYS EMINENT SPECIALIST

So-called stomach troubles, such as indigestion, wind, stomachache, and inability to retain food, are in probably nine cases out of ten simply evidence that fermentation is taking place in the food contents of the stomach causing the formation of gas and acids. Wind distends the stomach and causes that full, oppressive feeling sometimes known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach. The trouble lies entirely in the fermenting food. Such fermentation is unnatural and may involve most serious consequences if not corrected. To stop or prevent fermentation of the food contents of the stomach and to neutralize the acid and render it bland and harmless, a teaspoonful of bisulphated magnesia, probably the best and most effective corrector of acid stomach known should be taken in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water immediately after eating, or whenever wind or acidity is felt. This stops the fermentation, neutralizes the acidity in a few moments. Fermentation, wind and acidity are dangerous and unnecessary. Stop or prevent them by the use of a proper antacid, such as bisulphated magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist and thus enable the stomach to do its work properly without being hindered by poisonous gas and dangerous acids.—M. F. P.
