

n moving about through the of Lisbon without guard of any not only dominates the court, but dominates, even more of the government. Possessed of the temper, he cannot brook the and he has surrounded himself with who are willing and anxious to do his bidding. He has surrounded himself with a large number of dupes. The financial accounts of the country until the greatest of bankers cannot make head or tail of them. He loudly proclaims that, true promise, he has lifted the heavy burden of taxation from the poor, yet the number of 100,000 he has found it impossible to live the conditions. He has perfect system of taxation which can and in each particular case according to the known political sympathies of the individual. He has driven out of the country many of the richest people whom thousands were dependent on for livelihood. Agriculture, the only salvation, is comparatively at a standstill. Less than the country is under cultivation, enormous quantities of staple food, might, in other circumstances, be on the land, are imported. And foreign capital, which defunct al badly needs, would not touch untried with a barge pole, to use resolute phrase.

Carbanoirio
A undoubtedly owes his power to his personality, but even he could maintain long at the head of turbulent if he did not have behind him powerful influences. First and foremost there is the Carbanoirio, a secret society which seems destined to play a large part in the future of Portugal. It takes its name from the history of Italy. It is as if all the evidence that can be gathered is not a member of the Carbanoirio. He has said as much publicly. The minister of public works, cabinet is one of the professors and the actual head of the society is one of his closest supporters. Other circumstance that makes for his continuance in office or at least in the for whether in or out of office likely to pull the wires for many years to come—is his connection with the Freemasons. Every member of the Carbanoirio is a member of the Freemasons. The influence of the Freemasons, as in countries Italy, is enormous. Doubtless they were behind the clerical law that disestablished the Catholic church and practically drove the priests out of Portugal. Indeed, Costa is a free thinker, was the cause of it. After the overthrow of the monarchy, his temporary disappearance from the field as the cause of Portugal's ill, Costa concentrated the priests as the wicked villains in the piece. The monarchy was threatened from three sides. There are the Monarchists, who force in themselves, can be dislodged from serious consideration. There are the Syndicalists and the richists who in the early days of the monarchy were the premier, aristocratic supporters, but who are now because of his autocratic and abuse of power. Finally there is an extraordinary and almost universal reaction which has set in against the monarchy. The monarchy will be restored tomorrow at a free and tiered election.

The Magnetic Girl
V. SHE COMPELS OTHERS TO OBEY HER WILL
1000 Copies of Remarkable Book Describing Peculiar Psychic Powers to be Distributed Post Free to Readers of the St. John Times and Star

The wonderful power of Personal Influence, Magnetism, Fascination, Mind Control, call it what you will, can be acquired by everyone no matter how unattractive or unsuccessful, says Elmer Elsworth Knowles, author of the new book entitled: "The Key to Development of the Inner Forces." The book is a very many astounding facts and figures, and is a very simple though effective system of magnetism, and acts of others, how one may gain the love and friendship of those who might otherwise remain indifferent; how to quickly and accurately judge character and disposition of an individual; how to cure the most obstinate and habits without drugs or surgery; even the complex subject of "thought transference" is explained. Miss Josephine Davis, the popular favorite, whose portrait appears on the cover of the book, declares that Prof. Knowles' opens the door to success, health, happiness to every mortal, no matter what his position in life. She says that Prof. Knowles has discovered principles which, if universally applied, will revolutionize the mental of the human race. The book is a free of charge, is full of photographs reproducing how these forces are being used all over the world, and how thousands upon thousands have developed powers which they little dreamed they possessed. The free distribution of the 100,000 copies is being conducted by a large London institution, and a copy will be sent post free to anyone interested. No money need be sent, but those who wish to do so may enclose 5 cents (stamps of your own country) to cover postage, etc. All requests for the free book should be addressed to: National Institute of Sciences, Free Distribution Dept. 808 G, No. 229, Westminster Bridge Road, London, S. Captain On Great Lakes Restored To Health By Fruit-a-tives

For thirty years, Captain Swan followed the Great Lakes. He has now retired and lives at Port Burwell, where he is well known and highly esteemed.

H. SWAN, Esq.
Port Burwell, Ont., May 28, 1913
A man has a poor chance of living and enjoying life when he cannot eat. That was what was wrong with me. Loss of appetite and indigestion was brought on by Constipation. I have had trouble with these diseases for years. I lost a great deal of flesh and suffered constantly. For the last couple of years, I have taken "Fruit-a-tives" and have been so pleased with the results that I have recommended them on many occasions to friends and acquaintances. "Fruit-a-tives" have helped me greatly. By following the diet rules and taking "Fruit-a-tives" according to directions, any person with dyspepsia will get benefit. H. SWAN.
"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 25c. a box, 6 for $2.00 or trial size 25c., or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

MR. MASTERMAN'S PLEA FOR PEACE

C. F. G. Masterman, M. P., Financial Secretary to the Treasury, was the chief speaker at a recent meeting held by the North Salford Liberal Association in Salford, Eng.
Referring to the enormous and wasteful expenditure on armaments, Mr. Masterman said that if it continued to increase at its present rate it could only lead to the annihilation of European civilization. The liberal and labor spirit in all countries found itself baffled, dismayed, and humiliated by the growth of the burden of implements for the destruction of life. The waste of money was tremendous.
The amount by which the cost of the navy had increased since 1906, when the present government came into power, would, if spent as interest, provide good cottages for six million working class families. The moral loss, the depression of the whole moral consciousness of the European nations was also serious, and if Christendom were to sit still without protest people might well despair of the future progress of the human race.
But there were some signs of hope. The sword was still in its sheath. So might it continue so long as liberals were in power. They were fighting against the policy which was the policy of brandishing "loaded revolvers." Instead of recognizing that trade was one of the great peace-making agencies; and the policy of supplementing our supreme navy by a conscript army, which would only unite the nations of the world against us. The government was working for peace, and he believed that the time would come when the present position would be looked back upon as a nightmare. Every day saw a better understanding between the peoples of the world and a better recognition that war was a crime against humanity.

HOW TO SAY GOODBYE.

Two Accepted Ways to Separate at the Train—And the Exception.

The trim young man grabbed his suit case in his left hand, his hat in his right, threw his right arm around the shoulders of a subdued looking young girl, bent over her palatial, kissed her quickly on the mouth, and dashed through the fast closing gates and down the steps to catch the train.
The young woman hobbled over to the iron grating which restrains fond friends from falling into the well that engulfed departing travelers, clutched it hungrily searched the hurrying crowd below with her tear-dimmed eyes.
The trim young man paused as he was about to enter the car, cast a last glance upward to the weeping girl, glanced his hand, took off his hat and was gone.
The girl closed with a sharp clank, the station attendant slid the iron signs of the train's destination from the standard.
"Good thing that grating's steady," remarked the station attendant. "I don't know what the women would do without it. They have to have something to cling to when the head of the house goes traveling."
"He seems to take it lightly enough," said the onlooker.
"He's got to seem to," said the station attendant. "The public won't stand for a man making a fuss. In fact, there is only two ways for a man saying goodbye to be considered thoroughly correct. One of them is the way that young chap did. Hiss off in the right hand and arm around the shoulders, a quick short kiss, and then goodbye, a rush for the train and a howl or a wave of the hand before going through the gate or on board. The etiquette of that last depends on the station, as some of them aren't arranged so that the waiting friends can be seen at the last moment."

"The other way of doing it is even less fussy. The going away husband doesn't put his arm around his wife at all. He takes his hat in his right hand, rests his left hand lightly on the arm of the woman and bends over with a very palatial, bestowing an extremely light and fleeting kiss, either on the mouth or out of the corner of the eye. The couple who don't kiss each other goodbye at all, I don't know whether it's indifference or propriety. The general public, however, hasn't come to that yet. Still more exclusive folk don't come to the station to see each other off. They say goodbye in the privacy of their homes and come to the station accompanied only by their maids or valets. This rule, however, applies only to members of the ultra fashionable world."

The onlooker by this time had begun to feel distinctly gloomy when suddenly her attention was called to a recently arrived couple who were saying goodbye to each other.
The man was a very large man and the woman was a very small woman. The very large man snatched up the very small woman, pressed her close to him, kissed her on the cheek, forehead, mouth, nose, chin and a few other spots and set her down breathless, natty and a little fearful, but a good deal smiling. Then the very large man ran for his train, looking very much disturbed emotionally and quite undignifiedly.

"But," gasped the onlooker, "that wasn't like you say it is!"
"O, they were old-fashioned folks," said the attendant.—Chicago Record-Herald.

He Understood

The young man had asked for a horse that was gentle and safe.
As he drove out of the stable the livery man said: "The spring on the right side of the buggy is the stronger," and the young man blushed until his ears looked like a sunset in a chromo.

Useful Study

"Pa, I'm going to quit studying arithmetic; I don't like it."
"You're going to do nothing of the kind, young man. Why, arithmetic's the greatest study there is. How could anybody figure up the baseball averages if it wasn't for arithmetic?"

MACY'S BEATS PUBLISHERS.

Supreme Court Breaks Monopoly of Copyright Works.

Washington, Dec. 5.—The Supreme Court has handed down an important decision constraining the copyright laws. The court held in effect that the copyright laws cannot be used to maintain a monopoly in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law and that the copyright will not protect the owner in an effort to dictate the price to be charged beyond the first sale.
The court construed the patent laws in this way several months ago and the present decision on the copyright laws is a hard blow to those who have been seeking to fix the retail price of articles thus protected.
The decision was a complete victory for R. H. Macy & Co. of New York, in their suit to join the American Publishers Association and the American Booksellers' Association from enforcing an agreement with agents not to sell books to the Macy firm, which had been offering them to the public at prices below the retail price fixed by the publishers.

The action was begun by the Macy firm in the Supreme Court of New York and carried to the Court of Appeals. The Macy firm appealed to the United States Supreme Court from the final judgment of the New York tribunal, which had held that in so far as the agreement related to books not copyrighted it was in contravention of the anti-trust laws of the State of New York, but that as to books protected by federal copyright the publishers enjoyed a monopoly by virtue of their copyright and that the injunction would not lie.
Justice Day reversed the decision in an opinion which was concurred in unanimously by the other justices and held that the agreements between the publishers and booksellers contravened the Sherman anti-trust law and that this applied to the copyrighted as well as uncopyrighted books.

THE LATE EDGAR E. THOMPSON

The Banquet Commercial contains a long account of the funeral of Edgar E. Thompson at Greenville Junction on November 24. Mr. Thompson was an employee of the C. P. R. at the Junction and was killed by accident. Many beautiful floral tributes were sent by friends of the deceased. Mr. Thompson was born at Main River, Kent county, N. B., and was twenty-eight years old. Two years ago he was married to Miss Barbara McEachern of Greenville Junction and since that time had made his home in Brownville Junction. His father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Thompson, of Main River, were present at the funeral; other members of the family present were a brother, David L. Thompson, of Moncton, and five married sisters, with their husbands. Mr. and Mrs. F. N. Haskell of Brownville Junction, Mr. and Mrs. Waterman McCreary, and Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Reed of Greenville Junction, and Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Connaughton of Chapleau, Ontario, Can. A brother and two sisters were unable to be present. Mrs. Rodrick Robertson of Richibucto, N. B., W. H. Thompson of Stillwater, Minn., and George H. Thompson, of International Falls, Minn.

After a long-distance courtship in which each letter took a month in traveling 800 miles to its destination, Miss Blackmiller is soon to set out from St. Louis for Brazil, where she will marry Rev. Adolph Flor, a Lutheran missionary. With her will go three other young women who will become brides of workers in the same territory.

The world of music—what a gift!
Suppose you should wake up Christmas morning to find that some one had put the world of music in your stocking. That's precisely what you can do for any member of your family, or any of your friends, if you give an Edison Phonograph
The new types, without horns, are especially popular just now. They are made in artistic designs from a variety of beautiful woods. The one shown here is moderate priced. It is called the Ambrola VI. It plays the new Blue Amberol records, with all their remarkable beauty of sweetness and volume, with all their range of program. It is fitted with the diamond reproducing point that never wears out and never needs changing. An Edison is a permanent gift—one that will be a lasting pleasure for years to come. Can you imagine a more practical gift—or one that will bring more real delight to those you love?
