

WEEKLY WEATHER SYNOPSIS.

Victoria Meteorological Office, 9th to 15th October, 1901. During the first two days of the week a high barometer area, which had been in British Columbia, was slowly moving to the southeastward, the pressure giving way before the advance of a storm area which was traversing the northern part of the province. This movement caused cloudy weather on Vancouver Island and along the districts on the Straits and Sound; rain fell in those localities, and the North Pacific slope, and a vast area of high barometer steadily developed, the pressure rising to 30.55 inches at Kamloops. This position was maintained with but little change until Sunday, when the pressure began to fall, and by Monday morning the high area had almost disappeared, saving a small remnant centred in the Territories. This, however, increased, the pressure rising again over the province, and the week closing on Tuesday with moderately high barometer over this western portion of the continent, and the pressure, though somewhat irregular, showing indications of continuing increase. The weather on the whole has been exceedingly mild, the last five days being very pleasant with bright sunny intervals. Temperatures west of the Rockies have been abnormally high at intervals, reaching 90 at San Francisco and 94 in the valley of the Colorado, and 87 at Denver, occurred in Northern British Columbia. In the Northwest the weather has varied from clear to cloudy, with occasional rain, fresh to strong winds, and frosts chiefly at night. At Victoria 26 hours and 52 minutes of bright sunshine were registered, two days being completely clouded; highest temperature, 65.8, on 13th; lowest, 45, on 12th; rain, 0.1 inch. New Westminster—Highest, 64, on 13th and 14th; lowest, 40, on 12th; rain, .53 inch. Kamloops—Highest, 64, on 11th and 12th; lowest, 38, on 10th, 11th, 13th and 15th; rain, .06 inch. Barkerville—Highest, 56, on 12th; lowest, 26, on 15th; rain and snow, .54 inch.

CITY NEWS IN BRIEF.

(From Tuesday's Daily.)—Newly arrived from Salt Spring Island that Speaker Booth on arriving there had a relapse, and that his condition is again critical. —There was a meeting of the Natural History Society last evening, although a good audience had gathered to hear the lecture by W. M. Brewer, M.B., on the mining resources of Southwestern British Columbia and Vancouver and the Tuxada Islands. Mr. Brewer was on board the Hatang and did not reach the city till midnight. —Another of the lads who escaped from the reformatory has been gathered in, and there are now two who have not been recaptured. Yesterday Sergeant Redgrave obtained a clue of Chas. Hansen's whereabouts and located him at Spring Ridge in the vicinity of the sandpits. When the lad saw the officer he took to flight and refused to be daunted by so minor an obstacle as a yawning sandpit, into which he leaped. The sergeant then had him, and he was compelled to submit to the inevitable. The boy was under the influence of liquor when caught. —The case of cruelty at Macaulay Point, reported to the Society of Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and referred to in last evening's Times, has been immediately investigated by Dr. Hamilton, accompanied by Dr. Hamilton, the society's veterinary surgeon. He visited the Point last evening and found that the animal complained of had a frightfully lacerated neck, the rope attached with a slip knot having cut its way several inches into the neck on the upper and lower sides. Magots had actually formed, and were causing terrible distress. The rope had fortunately been removed by the grooms in charge of the stables at Work Point, or otherwise the poor animal would have choked to death, as the rope had caught in one of the horse's shoes. The thanks of the society are extended to the men at Work Point for their thoughtful and prompt action in the matter, who have on many former occasions rendered valuable assistance to suffering dumb animals. (From Wednesday's Daily.) —The old Dominion hotel, Yates street, is being converted into a stable for the accommodation of the horses and busses used by the more modern house. —The following contributions to the Extension mine relief fund have been received by the city treasurer: B. Pettigill, $2.50; proceeds of Fifth Regiment band concert, $78.20. —A fire at Leigh's mill occupied the attention of the fire department between 10 and 11 o'clock last night. It had broken out under the wooden floor of the boiler room, but the blaze was soon extinguished by the Victoria West chemical. —General Manager E. C. Hawkins, of the W. P. & Y. route, while in Skagway on the eve of his departure for Seattle, was presented by the employees of the railroad with a note containing $1,500. This gift attests the popularity Mr. Hawkins with men over whom he has had control while general manager of the W. P. & Y. route. —The B. C. Trade Budget has changed hands, the new publishers being Messrs. Harold Perry and J. W. Sangster, associated with G. Sheldon-Whitely and J. W. Sangster, the latter of whom will push the interests of the Trade Budget among the cities and towns of the province. The management says it is its intention to deserve and obtain the patronage of the public. The paper will be conducted on broad lines, avoiding anything that would lead to any one particular town or district; no expense being spared to procure efficient and reliable business information from every part of the province. The headquarters of the Trade Budget Co. Ltd., will continue to be in the city of Vancouver. The aim of the new management will be to improve every department of the paper. —The death occurred last night of Mrs. Annie Eliza Mason, widow of the late H. S. Mason. Deceased was a native of Cornwall, England, and about 60 years of age. She leaves a son, Harry, to mourn her loss. Mr. Mason is now a Stevenson. The funeral has not as yet been arranged. —The remains of the late James C. Leask were laid at rest this afternoon. The funeral took place from the residence, 186 Fort street, at 2:30 p.m. Rev. Dr. Campbell conducted the religious services both at the church and grave. The Tailors' union, of which deceased was a member, turned out in a body. —A rich musical treat is being provided for Victorians at Christmas. At the request of many musical patrons, Herbert Taylor intends conducting part of "The Messiah," and with a view to making the performance a memorable one, is engaging first-class principals who excel in the many musical parts. The numbers allotted to the baritone, Full particulars will be given out to the public later. A good chorus is required and the names of those desirous of becoming members and who will faithfully attend rehearsals will be received (personally or by letter) by Mr. Taylor, who attends at Messrs. Gideon Hicks & Co., Government street, every morning from 11 to 12 o'clock. The time being short, all applications for membership must be made on or before October 25th to ensure success. (From Thursday's Daily.) —Yesterday morning at the Christ Church cathedral John Henry White and Mrs. Mary Seymour Hooper were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by Rev. W. Baugh Allen. They left for the Sound on their honeymoon trip. —All suggested changes in the voters' lists for Victoria and Esquimalt electoral district should be filed before Monday. The court of revision will be held by Harvey Combe on Monday, November 4th, in the Victoria court house. —Messrs. W. B. and C. B. Sylvester have taken over the feed business in the Market building, which is now being conducted as The Sylvester Feed Company. The store, warehouse and wharf will continue to be operated by the new company. —Some so-called sports recently selected big game for their attention, and shot the harmless condor browsing at the Victoria and Esquimalt harbor. The poor animal was the property of H. Dallas Helmecken, M. P., and was the mascot of the place, where it has lived for several years. —At the meeting of the trades and labor council last evening the 'longshoremen' union was awarded the prize for the highest percentage of members of a union of 40 members at the meeting on Labor Day. As soon as the full returns are received from the secretaries of the unions other prizes will be distributed. —The remains of the late Mrs. H. S. Leask will be laid at rest at Ross Bay cemetery this afternoon. The funeral will take place from the family residence, No. 8 Church way, at 2:15, and at 2:30 from the Reformed Episcopal church. The religious services will be conducted by Bishop Gidycz, assisted by Rev. Dr. Wilson, both at the church and grave. —The provincial assy office has been kept extremely busy this week handling the gold dust consigned here. Already this week they have assayed over $150,000 worth of gold dust. One small brick which has just been handled is from Copper River, Alaska, and the color of the brick is much yellower than that of other Klondike or Atlin. —The death occurred at Nanaimo yesterday of Lewis Vogel, for many years one of the leading baseball players of Nanaimo and of the province. The late Mr. Vogel went to Nanaimo about ten years ago from Illinois to play as catcher for the Coal City club. Up to a year ago he was an active member of the nine. The deceased was about 32 years of age, and leaves a brother residing in Illinois. —There was a sale of obsolete ordnance stores at Signal Hill, Esquimalt, this morning, which was thinly attended, a few machinery men and junk dealers being the only exceptions present. The list of articles disposed of was a heterogeneous one from forges, signal flags, army clothing, couches and other articles, including a large quantity of a few years shed yesterday, have borne their captivity with equanimity. —It is the intention of the trades and labor council to invest the surplus accruing from the recent Labor Day celebration in the way of providing a permanent place of meeting for the labor organizations of the city. With that end in view the council last evening instructed the hall committee to enter into negotiations with Messrs. R. Porter & Sons for a lease of the rooms over their new butcher shop, corner of Douglas and Johnston streets. The work of preparing the building for the accommodation of the trades unions will be proceeded with at once, and it is expected that in the course of a few weeks will be ready for occupation. —When you cannot sleep for coughing, it is hardly necessary that anyone should tell you that you need a few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to allay the irritation of the throat, and make sleep possible. It is good. Try it. For sale by Henderson Bros., Wholesale Agents.

SEEING IS BELIEVING. —About every one who examines these special novels offered at a quarter each through the International Association of Newspapers and Authors wonders how it can be done, for the novels are the copyrighted (protected) kind which are usually priced above a dollar. The books are by such well-known writers as Paul Leicester Ford, Stockton, Cable and Amelia E. Barr. They are all in fine cloth binding in various delicate tints and with individual cover designs; they are printed from the very same plates as the most expensive editions, and are therefore just as good to read, and the price is only a quarter a copy. "Seeing is believing." Learn particulars from an announcement on page 7 of this Evening's Times. —ATTEMPTED MURDER. News of a Sensational Affair in the Atlin District. News comes from Atlin of an affair which nearly terminated in murder and in a subsequent suicide about two weeks ago. A well known restaurant keeper of that city named Charles Henning, who has been in the country about two years, quarreled with his wife on some jealous score, and the matter caused him to brood considerably. As a result of the work he received he sought his wife on the day mentioned, and after picking another quarrel with her he pulled out a razor and made for the woman. She ran away, but was not quick enough to escape the fiend. Coming up on her Henning slashed at her unmercifully. The woman tried to protect herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected that she will throw herself from the razor thrusts with her hands and was very badly carved up. She fell to the ground in a swoon, and Henning thinking he had killed her made an attempt to sever his jugular vein, but was prevented from carrying out his design by the appearance of some neighbors. He was handed over to the police, and the woman was called in to see what could be done for Henning's wife. The woman finally recovered, but not before the doctor had placed forty-seven stitches in various parts of her body. It is expected