BROTHERS COMMIT SUICIDE.
Swallow Carbolic Acid and Die in a Cab.

Southampton street, Strand, London, England, was the scene of a double suicide the other afternoon. Two cabmen, named Richardson, brothers, taking poison together in one of their vehicles between three and four o'clock. People hurrying along the busy thoroughfare at the foot of the street at the time could hardly have been aware of the incident, for within a few minutes of its occurrence the two men, the older of whom is named Harry and the younger Walter (popularly known to his comrades as "Wally") were removed to the Charing Cross Hospital, where, on arrival, the first named was found to be dead, while the latter succumbed within a quarter of an hour.

Both men, it seems, had been drinking heavily of late, the younger having only recently regained his license. On the day of their suicides they were much the worse for liquor, and it is understood that there was some trouble with the police on point of duty, which might have had unpleasant consequences for the timely intervention of their friends. According to one of these, the cab at the time was being driven by the younger Walter. When they were taken to the hospital, the younger Walter was found to be dead, while the older Walter was found to be alive, but in a state of unconsciousness. It was stated that the younger challenged the elder to take the poison with him.

TOMMY'S SUGGESTION.

The family were putting up their best airs because Juanita's beau had moved to the Charing Cross Hospital, where, on arrival, the first named was found to be dead, while the latter succumbed within a quarter of an hour.

When little Tommy called out: "You ought to eat sponges," Mr. Smith, looking very stern, "Because my man says you are an awful sponge."

A contemporary contains the following unique advertisement: "Any person who can prove that his placenta contains anything injurious to health will have three boxes of it sent to him free of charge."

About the House

FAVORITE RECIPES.

Indian Meal Bread—Three cups Indian meal, 1 1/2 cups Graham flour or rye meal, 2-3 cup molasses, 3 cups sour milk, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/2 cup shortening, 14 rounded teaspoons salaratus and 1/2 teaspoon soda. Put in a tin cover, and pour into a tin cover, and steam two hours.

Baked Beans—Soak a heaping pint dish of the yellow-eyed pea beans overnight or until they are plump. Pour off the water and put into a kettle with 1/2 teaspoon soda, fill up with water, bring to a boil, and stewing until soft, but not broken. Drain in colander. Put a pinch of ground mustard in the bottom of the bean pot; also, prepare a piece of salt pork about three inches square, and cut it into four pieces, adding 1 tablespoon salt and a little over 2 tablespoons molasses. Just cover with water, bring to a boil, and set in the oven. Keep filled with water until nearly done.

Indian Pudding—One quart milk, 7 tablespoons meal (not heated). Scald the milk, then wet the meal with milk, or water, and pour it in the hot milk, and add cup molasses, 1 cup cream, 1 teaspoon ginger, oil of cinnamon, and salt. I omit the cream from the pudding, and use a sauce of cream.

Pumpkin Pie—Take 1 pt. stewed pumpkin, 1 cup sugar in which are mixed 2 teaspoons ginger and 1 teaspoon cinnamon, a little salt, 3 crackers dried in the oven and then pounded fine, and 3 cups milk. Mix in the order named.

Sponge Gingerbread—Half a cup of butter or soft cream, 3 cups molasses, 4 cup sour milk, 2 teaspoons medium stiffness, 1/2 cup sugar, 1/2 spoon salt. Warm the butter, stir together in the order mentioned, and lastly add 1/2 cup flour. Beat briskly for a minute, pour into a large dripping pan and bake in a moderate oven.

PETTICOAT POINTS.

All other articles of lingerie pale into insignificance before the petticoat. There are three principles which must be observed in making it: First, it must fit as perfectly as the dress skirt; second, it must fit close around the waist; third, it must be made of material which will stand up to the most severe wear.

Whenever one is not reasonably certain that the meat he eats has been carefully inspected and declared to be safe, it is better to avoid it. This means one is sure to kill all the germs which are in the meat, and to avoid the danger of tuberculosis.

STERILIZING MILK.

How to Guard Against Germs of Tuberculosis in Food.

sterilized before use, more especially when it is intended as food for children. Milk obtained from stores and from milk peddlers should invariably be submitted to boiling or sterilization. When milk is kept slowly boiling for five minutes, all the bacteria which are contained in it are killed, and the same result is obtained by the sterilizing process. It is to say, to keep the milk heated for at least half an hour at a temperature of about 70 degrees C. or 160 degrees F. There are now in practical use a number of cheap and practical apparatuses for sterilizing milk, which can be obtained at almost any drugstore.

USEFUL TISSUE PAPER.

One would be surprised to know how many uses can be made of tissue paper, an article that abounds in most households, as the cheapest and most useful in packing delicate goods. Probably few people have tested it.

Apply This Test to the Nerves

If You Have These Symptoms Your Nerves Are Weak and Exhausted—You Can Get Well by Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Nervous diseases are little understood. They have long been enshrouded in more or less mystery by the medical profession. They are not, as many people think, the result of a morbid state of the system, but of a morbid state of the nerves themselves. They are not, as many people think, the result of a morbid state of the system, but of a morbid state of the nerves themselves.

PERSONAL POINTERS.

Notes of Interest About Some Prominent People.

The King of Italy has successfully passed his examination as a motor-car driver. A humorous friend of King Edward recently gave him a silver stethoscope as a present—the point being in the not generally known fact that His Majesty has been given diplomas as a physician and surgeon.

The Grand Duke Paul of Russia is so tall that no hotel bed is long enough for him, and he has one built in sections, which he carries with his luggage everywhere. The bed is put up by a special mechanic wherever the Grand Duke goes.

It is remarkable that Vorsehagin, the Russian painter of battle scenes, should do such capable work when one remembers how terribly his right hand has suffered. A leopard bit off the thumb, while a rifle ball struck the middle finger during a battle, and the rest of his fingers were badly smashed in a sleight accident.

Mackenzie, the well-known Spanish bull-fighter, was a railway porter before he found his present occupation. Growing weary of his humble work he said: "I must make money. In Spain there are only two ways to be a tumbler or a bull-fighter. I can't sing, but I know I can kill a bull." He began in a small way, and soon became the greatest bull-killing artist in Spain.

A wealthy man holding a high position in America once wrote Mark Twain, who failed to answer his letter. The writer, who waited a considerable time for a reply, at length became so exasperated that he sent most of paper and stamp to Twain, who immediately replied on a post-card: "Paper and stamp received. Please forward answer."

The new Amer of Afghanistan sets aside one day in the week, entirely for the consideration of military affairs, devoting a second day to international affairs, and a third to executive duties. Every night from eight till twelve, unless urgent business intervenes, the Amer studies foreign affairs. An Oriental touch on Fridays, from early morning till late at night, his Highness "sits in the assembly of the learned Mullahs of Afghanistan, who talk her wisdom and questions of Mohammedan law."

The Kaiser was one of the first to succeed to the fascinating occupation of ping-pong. Quite recently, when the Emperor formed the principal guest at a banquet party, he was conspicuous as he always is, in providing entertainment after dinner. The evening of the Emperor's visit to the United States, he was seen at a table with a large box of American ping-pong balls, which he took with him, stopping on his way to the White House, where he was seen to purchase a pair of ping-pong balls. One box was handed over to his valet, and the other to his valet. Mr. Wilson opened the second, together with a card entreaty for "to wear one of my balls, as I have a great deal of ping-pong balls, and I am sure you will find them very useful."

CANCER RESEARCH FUND.

Outlines of the Scheme of Investigation.

The scheme of investigation into the cause, nature, and treatment of cancer, for which a fund of £100,000 is required, includes, according to the British Medical Journal, the following proposals:—
First—To provide equip, materials and endow laboratories to be devoted exclusively to cancer research.
Second—To provide an honorarium for the director of cancer research.
Third—To provide paid assistants to the director and grants in aid of cancer research within the United Kingdom or in any part of the British dominions beyond the seas.
Fourth—To assist in the development of the cancer research department of any other hospital where a special cancer department may be provided.
Fifth—To provide for the investigation of any method which may be suggested from time to time for the prevention, treatment, or cure of cancer and to arrange for the testing, under proper supervision, of any suggested remedy for cancer.
Sixth—Generally to provide means for systematic investigation into the cause, prevention and treatment of cancer. Mr. Hutton informed Mr. A. Lee in the British House of Commons that he was not in favor of appointing a royal commission to inquire into the disease of cancer, but that he was in favor of appointing a royal commission to inquire into the disease of cancer, but that he was in favor of appointing a royal commission to inquire into the disease of cancer.

Two people were said to be half-witted when they have an understanding between them.
